WHITE HOUSE LIQUOR HIT BY CHURCH

Gardner, May 13 (AP)—The New England conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church today adopted a resolution criticizing what it termed, the "serving of liquor in the White House."

"We note with sincere and profound regret," the resolution said, "that liquor is served within the home of the President of the United States, and that it was even served at a New Year's reception to young people within the White House.

"We note also that the government has recently dispatched its first shipment of rum from the Virgin Islands where it was made as a Works Progress Administration project and bearing the name, 'Government House Rum.'

"Thus, we who are individual citizens of the United States are made partners in the manufacturing of intoxicating liquors. This we criticize with all the force at our command."

The conference also condemned what it termed the legalizing of gambling in Massachusetts, the spread of "unclean literature" and the "tremendous increase in crime."

Arthur J. Davis, superintendent of the Massachusetts Anti-Saloon League, asserted conditions were much worse than before prohibition.

The city of Boston, he said, through its City Hospital was spending $375,000 a year to sober off men and women who were brought there in alcoholic comas. He urged the conference to "bring every member into the fight against liquor traffic."

The conference approved a plan to complete a program adopted in 1927 to raise a reserve pension fund of $225,000.

GAS HURLED AT STEEL STRIKERS

Pittsburgh, May 13 (INS) Tear gas was hurled by police today in a brief but hectic battle with a crowd of 500 pickets at gates of the Jones and Laughlin Steel Corporation plant in Aliquippa.

It was the first extensive violence in the Steel Workers' Organizing Committee strike which paralyzed the company's plants in Aliquippa and in this city, temporarily throwing 30,000 employees out of work and bringing a crowd of 20,000 men, women and children out to the picket lines.

SWOC officials here charged the attack was unprovoked, hurled threats of retaliation and announced an appeal would be made to Governor George H. Earle.

$610 from Roll Pays Auto Fine

When Judge Nash of Quincy court fined Martin A. Bowman of New Bedford $610 today, the defendant surprised spectators by calmly peeling off the bills from a bankroll of $900 and paying.

Bowman, who had at first said he was James F. Curley of Pawtucket, R. I., was found guilty of drunkenness, operating an automobile while under the influence of liquor and setting up and promoting a lottery.

He was arrested after a chase by police from Sumner street, Quincy Point, to dead-end Keating road, where his car tipped over. Police testified they found stubs in the machine for the "Old Colony Press Club" lottery of Lawrence.

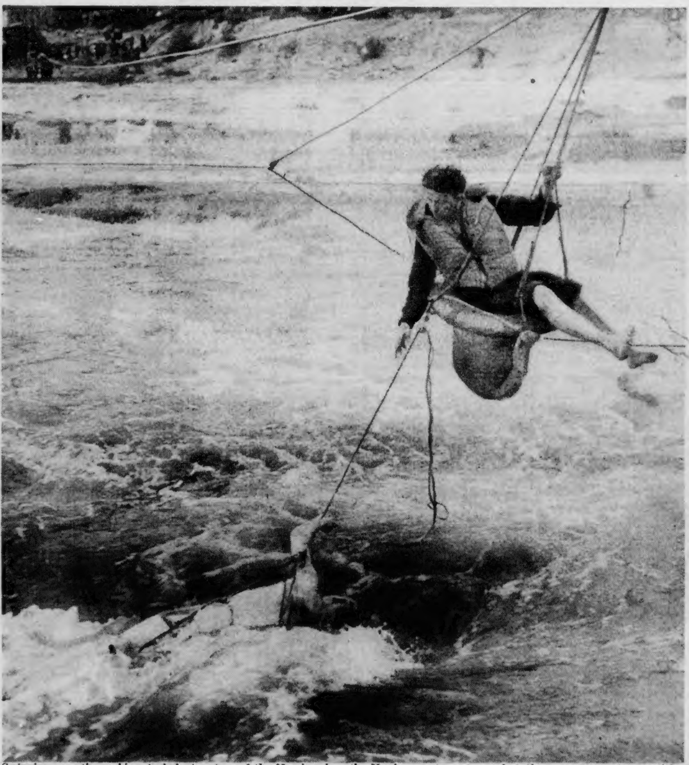
Breeches Buoy Used to Bring Body Ashore



Swinging over the rushing, turbulent waters of the Merrimack river in a breeches buoy, a coastguardsman today recovered the body of George F. Spead, 39, of Lowell, who drowned yesterday afternoon. The body was wedged between two rocks. After the rope for the buoy was fired 500 feet from a hawser gun on the easterly side of the river, Surfman Robert H. Westcott of the Newburyport coast guard station swung over to a position over the body. Barefooted, he dropped to one of the rocks. Then he tied a rope around the body and was hauled to shore, dragging the body through the tumbling water. Thousands lined the shore and nearby bridge and watched the thrilling spectacle. Billion and Half Relief Favored

Washington, May 13 (INS)—Crushing stubborn opposition, the House appropriations committee today voted to recommend appropriation of $1,500,000,000 for relief, as requested by President Roosevelt.

The committee reversed the action of its deficiency subcommittee, which had voted to slash the proposed fund to $1,000,000,000 as a part of the congressional economy drive.

Stocks Topple $1-$5 a Share

New York, May 13 (AP)—Fresh labor difficulties in steel and motor centers today kicked the props from under the stock market.

Leading issues slumped $1 to $5 generally, with a few off much more in dealings that occasionally put the ticket tape behind. Numerous new lows for the year or longer were posted.

Industrials and utilities led the fast retreat.

Duke Insistent Wally Be Called 'Her Highness'

BULLETIN

Monts, France, May 13 (AP) — Wallis Warfield and the Duke of Windsor stayed inside the Chateau De Cande today. A new flow of "crank" letters, some of which threatened Mrs. Warfield, caused a more rigid guard at the chateau.

With the colorful coronation of George VI as King passing into history, world attention today swings sharply to a new controversy between Edward, Britain's ex-King, and the government of the empire.

This new clash centers upon an insistence by the former monarch as Duke of Windsor that his bride, Mrs. Wallis Warfield, be formally recognized as "Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Windsor." This, the cabinet flatly refuses. The duke also demands freedom in making plans for a public wedding, not a private ceremony such as the Baldwin regime is said to have insisted upon.

Duke Pleads With Mother

Monts, France, May 13 (AP)—The Duke of Windsor demanded today that the British Government leave him free to make his own wedding plans and respect Wallis Warfield, his bride-to-be, so, as he told his mother, "we can all be happy once more."

The royal family backed the former king's insistence that the government not interfere with Edward's plans for a public wedding to Mrs. Warfield, and that it recognize her officially as the Duchess of Windsor.

The duke discussed the situation with Queen Mother Mary by telephone and urged the beloved Mary to try and clear up the problem.

It has deadlocked government and royal family.

"Mother, we can all be happy once more," he was said to have told her—if Queen Mary and King George VI can bring the government around to approving the marriage.

His insistence, which had the approval of the queen mother and King George VI, brought into the open the difference between the House of Windsor and the Cabinet over the forthcoming nuptials.

WANT SERVICE PRIVATE

The Cabinet has taken the stand that the marriage should be strictly private and not be attended by any member of the royal family except as a private person.

The government may even de-

Lodge's Kinsman To Wed Rich Widow

Henry Sears, 24-year-old Beacon Hill and Beverly socialite, and brother-in-law of U. S. Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, filed intentions in Beverly today to marry a wealthy young Greenwich, Ct., widow.

His bride-to-be is Mrs. Mary P. Smithers, 29, widow of Austin L. Smithers, former New York yachtsman. Her home is in Stanwich road, Greenwich.

Sears, son of Dr. and Mrs. Henry F. Sears of 86 Beacon street, is a graduate of Yale University and has offices in New York city, where he is engaged in scientific research.

Clash Over Wally's Rank

London, May 13 (AP)—The Duke of Windsor's pre-nuptial struggle with the British government, authoritative sources disclosed today, is for recognition of Mrs. Wallis Warfield, his bride-to-be, as "Her Royal Highness, the Duchess of Windsor."

The Duke, it was learned, will not be content to have Mrs. Warfield become merely "the Duchess of Windsor."

So heated has the dispute between the former monarch and the government become that Prime Minister Baldwin's cabinet today reviewed the whole question.

SPURNS COMPROMISE

Having yielded to Windsor's demands that Mrs. Warfield become a duchess, the ministers stood pat against allowing her to be addressed, "her royal highness," it was reported.

A source close to the government disclosed that negotiations have been going on for some time in an effort to bring both adamant sides to a compromise.

But Windsor, they said, is insistent that his bride be called "her royal highness," the government that she not be so titled.

PLEADINGS IN VAIN

Secret ambassadors from the government, these sources said, have argued and pleaded with the duke but have been unable to convince him that he alone is entitled to the distinction of being a "royal highness" because of his royal blood.

Mrs. Warfield, they are said to have contended, has no such claim because she is a commoner and has not the faintest hope for succession to the throne either directly for herself or through any children she might bear.

mand a religious service if the duke persists in his demand for a public wedding.

This, one source said, would necessitate finding an Anglican minister to officiate, despite the Church of England's opposition to Edward's marriage to the former Mrs. Simpson.

Edward, meanwhile, was described by his friend and spokesman, Herman L. Rogers, as very happy the coronation of his brother yesterday had gone so smoothly.

Rogers, commenting on the celebration which the duke staged in honor of the coronation, declared:

"All of us had a swell time last night."

The government's insistence against attendance of any member of the House of Windsor. The wedding was said to have been the direct cause of the duke's postponing of the ceremony until June.

KING BEHIND MOVE

The move was made, friends said, at the request of his brother and newly crowned successor, King George VI, who is leading the fight for formal recognition of the romance.

Edward was understood to have talked by telephone last night, both with George and their younger brother, the Duke of Kent, whom Windsor wants to be his best man.

King George, backed by the stately Queen Mother Mary, whose deep hold in the hearts of her people was demonstrated again and again at yesterday's coronation, was said to feel that Britain owed its former King a public celebration on his wedding.

Edward's long services to the Empire as Prince of Wales and his place as a former ruler were said to be weapons George was bringing to bear on the cabinet in a fight to secure the recognition the duke desires through the presence of members of his family.

Windsor may have made some suggestions in his conversation with his monarch last night, but the most important phases of the problem have been handled only through trained couriers.

The duke, although desiring recognition of his union with Mrs. Warfield, was said to have expressed his willingness once again to bow to the government, just as he did in stepping from the throne into exile when the cabinet opposed his marriage.

Windsor feted the coronation of his brother into the morning hours today after a special dinner party at the Chateau de Cande where he and Mrs. Warfield are guests.

Long after midnight lights blazed from the windows of the ancient castle. Windsor and his fiance were described as happy and gay after doing their best to make the coronation a success through self-imposed seclusion.

UPSET BY ANNOUNCEMENT

Even further secrecy was imposed on their activities by the duke who was said to have been annoyed that the engagement between Mrs. Warfield and himself was announced just before his brother's coronation.

The engagement announcement came from friends who believed the duke had authorized its publication.

"The duke feels that until some announcement can be made regarding his marriage it will be better not to give piecemeal details," Herman L. Rogers, his American friend and spokesman said

Indications at the chateau, however, were that a statement of the wedding plans might be made next Monday, leading to the belief that the deadlock between the British government and its ruler might be broken by that time.

New King to Raise Beard

London, May 13—British government officials and the press embarked today on a sturdy effort to forget King George's "older brother" and stress the memory of his father in a crescendo of post-coronation exultation.

With column after column printed about the king and the designation, "older brother," adopted by the newspapers for the Duke of Windsor, there were revived reports that George VI, now that he has time, will grow a bread to look more like George V.

British efforts are being bent to heighten the parallels between George VI, newly crowned, and the late George V.

Aside from the rumors of an intended berad for the king, many radio listeners who heard George VI last night remarked upon the strong resemblance in the voices of father and son.

British Press Silent On Duke's Bridal Stand

London, May 13 (AP)—The feeling of Edward of Windsor about his wedding and his wife-to-be and apparent efforts of government and royal family to reconcile their differences on the subject failed today to reach a coronation-sated public.

No London newspaper carried a story about the situation. Many persons, recalling the self-imposed press silence in the early stages of last December's abdication crisis, wondered what course the papers would follow up to and through the wedding, probably in June, of the former King and Wallis Warfield.

Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin's broadcast of last night, introducing the King to the world by radio, seemed, however, a patent thrust at the self-exiled Edward.

The premier dedicated King and family to "a service that can be ended only by death"—words which quickly turned back the pages of England's recent history to Edward's own action in preferring Wallis Warfield to that service.

Baldwin, moreover, used the word "service" eight times in his short talk.

For some time it has been believed generally in London that the Duke and Duchess of Kent or the princess royal would attend Edward's wedding. Nothing, however, has been announced and the government itself has maintained a studied indifference.

OPENS TOMORROW TO WEIGH PROBLEMS OF EMPIRE

London, May 13 (AP)—Empire statesmen faced about today from the medieval symbolism of the coronation of George VI, king-emperor of Britain, to the modern realities of the commonwealth's most pressing problems.

Prime ministers and representatives of the dominions and of India, having paid their tributes to their monarch and his queen, Elizabeth, awaited the call of Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin tomorrow that will open the imperial conference.

Seven years of sweeping change have passed since the empire met last in formal conference in 1930. Attention has turned from internal problems of imperial relations and economics to concern for foreign affairs and defense of the empire.

Britain confronts a world obstructed by trade barriers damming the commerce which sustains the empire, alarmed by threats to its peace structure and rearming competitively.

Dominion prime ministers, now standing equally with officials of the United Kingdom, will ask for a clear statement of British policy at home and abroad.

They will want to know the empire's stand on the League of Nations, on European affairs, on empire trade and on defense of Britain's "life-line" communications should war engulf it or any of its components.

For the first time on equal footing, they will state their own views.

There have been some notable changes in the membership of the conference. Newfoundland, her Dominion constitution suspended, will not have direct representation.

Burma, separated from the Indian empire, will have an observer for the first time. The Irish Free State, absorbed in discussions of its proposed new constitution, will not send delegates.

Britain's newly crowned king and queen got a little respite today before starting the whirl of post-coronation festivities.

FLOOD OF TELEGRAMS

George VI lingered at Buckingham Palace after yesterday's exhausting ordeal. He and Elizabeth scanned many of the 40,000 telegrams of felicitation they received from all over the world.

During the morning the royal regalia—St. Edward's crown, the swords of state and other jewel-studded coronation symbols—were returned in a closed automobile to safe keeping in the thick-walled Tower of London.

Except for a two-day break, 41-year-old George VI and his 37-year-old Scottish queen, Elizabeth, were scheduled to make public appearances daily for the rest of this month in fulfillment of the task to which they were dedicated in yesterday's medieval-modern pageantry of coronation.

The serious-faced young monarch, responding to the acclaim of his empire, said:

"The Queen and I will always keep in our hearts the inspiration of this day. May we ever be worthy of the good will which I am proud to think surrounds us at the outset of my reign.

"This is indeed a grave and constant responsibility," he declared, pledging that "we will, God helping us, faithfully discharge our trust."

FACES HEAVY TASKS

The slender king-emperor and his bonny wife must don full dress and decorations tonight for the second brilliant state banquet at Buckingham Palace.

Tomorrow they will dine again in state at the foreign office in Whitehall. Later they will lead off dancing at the court ball in the palace.

On Saturday they will hold a formal reception for departing foreign royalty and special envoys.

London's riotous gaiety continued almost unabated and thousands again thronged approaches to the royal residence following last night's tumultous scenes in which the royal couple made four balcony appearances.

The throng remained before the palace, equally unmoved by rain and police, until at last officials announced the royal couple would not come again to the balcony. From the palace it was announced that the King "was not unduly tired" by the arduous day.

The King did not plan to attend the coronation costume ball at Royal Albert Hall, Kensington, where thousands were to dance tonight away, but he invited 40 guests to look down on the merrymakers from the crimson-hung royal box.

The heavy tasks assumed by the King and Queen since the December abdication of George's elder brother, Edward, were only beginning.

Tomorrow more than 2000 dominion and colonial troops will parade in the Palace garden for the monarch's inspection. He will pass along the ranks, presenting to all the coronation medals especially struck to commemorate their trip to London from the ends of the empire.

Queen Elizabeth and the little princesses, Elizabeth, the 11-year-old who some day may be the center of another such celebration, and six-year-old Margaret Rose, were expected to watch these ceremonies.

Next Wednesday the King and Queen will drive in state again through cheering lanes of Londoners and visitors to the historic city Guild Hall for luncheon with the Lord Mayor, Sir George Broadbridge.

The ancient ceremony at Temple Bar—boundary of the old city of London—then will be revived for the first time in the new reign. The Lord Mayor will advance to the King's carriage and surrender to him the pearl sword, presented by Queen Elizabeth in 1571, as a sign that the city continues to pay homage to the crown.

That same evening the King will leave for Portsmouth to board the royal yacht Victoria and Albert in readiness for a mammoth naval review the next day.

ROUND OF FETES

The royal couple will drive through the city once more on May 24 to attend Empire Day services at St. Paul's Cathedral. The next day will be the prime minister's dinner party for Their Majesties at No. 10 Downing street, and the following night another court ball at Buckingham Palace will celebrate Queen Mary's birthday.

On the night of May 27 the royal couple will attend an evening reception for the London County Council at County Hall, Westminster, and the next day there will be a levee by the King in the state room at St. James' Palace.

There will follow an imposing array of other levees and garden parties, and July will bring no rest for Their Majesties. State visits to Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland will take them from London at the end of the season.

So it goes on endlessly—this responsible job of holding a symbolical scepter over an empire that girds a quarter of the earth.

Today, thousands of revelers nursed bruises and hangovers incurred in yesterday's long celebration. Street cleaners worked to clear the litter from the route of the coronation parade to Westminster Abbey.

About 2,000,000 persons that formed surging, cheering lanes along the six and one-half mile route to the Abbey left their mark.

Workmen started taking down the tiers of grandstand seats which had groaned under their tightly-packed loads. Trafalgar square's fountain lakes were floating with orange peel, paper cartons and almost every form of debris.

It was as though an enormous circus had folded its tents and gone.

HUGE RUBBISH GROUND

Hyde Park, ordinarily proud and beautiful, was an unsightly rubbish ground.

The gorgeous blue and gold decorations and temporary coronation furnishings at Westminster Abbey will be sold, now that the big show is over. Priceless tapestries that graced the vaulted chamber in which the coronation ritual was performed will be returned to the Duke of Buccleuch and Lord Duveen who lent them.

Among the things to be sold was a beautiful, seamless blue Axminster carpet made especially to cover the 173 by 17-foot grand processional way in the abbey. Its cost was unofficially estimated at about $50,000.

STATE BANQUET FOR KING TONIGHT

By KINGSBURY SMITH
International News Service Staff Correspondent

London, May 13—After the gayest, most prolonged burst of revelry ancient London ever saw, the city went back to work today and scavengers took possession of the coronation route which King George and Queen Elizabeth traveled, yesterday, in medieval splendor.

Court officials were plunged into preparations for the next great event of coronation week, the state banquet at Buckingham Palace tonight. The banquet will be largely similar to the glittering and brilliant affair held in the palace Monday night.

Workers, meanwhile, labored to restore London to something like its normal appearance. And in this they faced no easy task.

They had to remove tons of sodden newspapers, cardboard cartons and other refuse which had been ground to pulp under thousands of milling feet during an all-night rain that failed to dampen the spirits of hordes of revelers.

DEATH TOLL OF 3

But the crowds who watched the coronation procession and later celebrated the event with a night of cavorting in the streets transformed staid Trafalgar Square, St. James' park and the stately Mall into what looked like vast garbage dumps.

The coronation celebrants also counted a death roll of three as a result of the activities surrounding the coronation. One of the dead was killed in a dispute over sidewalk space. He was hit by a beer bottle.

Two others dropped dead from sheer excitement.

Ambulance officials reported more than 7,500 persons injured during the festivities—about 200 of them seriously. Ninety of these were taken to hospitals after being involved in traffic accidents or sustaining injuries in the terrific crush when the streets were lined 20 deep by procession spectators.

"HILARIOUS" PARTIES

Following the day of intense strain and fatigue while the coronation rituals and processions were in progress, usually reserved Londoners, reinforced by 50,000 Americans and other visitors from every corner of the earth, let themselves go.

The whole town "went hilarious," as one observer put it. Thousands crowded into night clubs. Hotels, restaurants, private clubs, London's famous "bottle parties," tiny cafes—everywhere that promised gaiety and relaxation—was jammed to the eaves.

Many young peeresses, some of them still wearing the dresses they wore for the coronation ceremony in Westminster Abbey, joined the dining and dancing throngs, along with scores of dress-uniformed army and navy officers.

American entertainers, like Harry Richman and the De Marcos, packed the crowds into the spots where they were performing and the jollity was increased by the fact that every "highbrow" and "lowbrow" post sold liquor far into the night.

MIDNIGHT GREETING

At the height of the excitement, men and women, many of them complete strangers to each other, locked arms and cavorted about the streets like school children in what became almost a fanatical burst of enthusiasm for the royal family.

Half an hour before midnight, while thousands waiting jubilantly in the rain cheered themselves hoarse, the King and Queen made a fourth and final appearance on the Buckingham Palace balcony.

When they left, it was announced they had retired for the night.

But whether they could sleep with the cheers ringing in their ears was a question.

WALLY'S RANK IN DISPUTE

that his future ducess be a "royal highness" is not known.

Some informed circles, however, believe it is a simple question of pride on his part. They point out that having both the duke and duchess called "royal highness" would dispel any suggestion that, once married, they are not of the same regal rank.

The government's insistence on cutting Mrs. Warfield's title short after the expected June wedding, on the other hand, is believed to be based on the intricate question of precedence.

FEW WORDS MEAN MUCH

In the world of royalty a few words, more or less, make a vast difference in rank.

Until now former King Edward VIII is understood to have had the backing of the royal family in general. But a rift between him and some of his relations is said to be widening now over the three words, "her royal highness."

Some of these relatives recent what they deem to be the intrusion of an "American woman" in their affairs.

ENDANGERS RETURN

Any hope of the Duke of Windsor to return to London are endangered by his fight with the government, authoritative sources said.

Many informed persons believe he intends eventually to come back from his self-imposed exile. Social experts have hinted he might find resentful barriers raised against him if his wife were a "royal highness."

Mrs. Warfield, with that title, would rank with the Duchess of Kent and the Duchess of Gloucester above other peeresses.

But with the shorter title, on which the government insists, the experts point out, she would enter a long list of other duchesses led by the influential Duchess of Norfolk.

DUBLIN RAIDERS BLAST STATUE OF GEORGE II

Dublin, May 13 (INS)—London's coronation found a drastic repercussion in the Irish Free State capital today when a statue of a former British monarch was blown to pieces.

Authorities began an immediate investigation of the blast, which destroyed the statue of King George II, located on St. Stephen's Green, which was destroyed by a land mine at 8:15 a. m.

Anti-monarchists also smashed the windows of two shops in which British-made records of the coronation ceremony, photograph albums, flags and statues of Queen Victoria were being displayed.

The statue portrayed the ancient British ruler in an equestrian pose.

It was regarded as significant that whoever was responsible for the act of vandalism chose the statue of a namesake of King George VI, whose coronation in London yesterday as "King of Ireland" aroused widespread resentment in the Irish Free State.

Representing themselves as members of the Irish Republican army, a group of men early today invaded the Cork offices of the Irish Times demanding that coronation pictures of the newly crowned King George VI and his consort, Queen Elizabeth, be removed from today's issue of the paper.

The pictures were removed when the demonstrators threatened repetition of the previous night's bloody disorders.

RULERS in Surprise TOUR

KING, QUEEN WILDLY HAILED

London, May 13 (AP)—King George VI and Queen Elizabeth, smiling and rested, drove through London streets this afternoon in a surprise post-coronation tour.

A closed car, bearing their Majesties, rolled through the Buckingham Palace gateway and along the Mall.

Neither the King nor the Queen showed the slightest sign of fatigue. They beamed and waved at the crowds.

From the Mall the car crossed great Trafalgar square, scene of tumult during yesterday's procession of state, and up Charing Cross road to Shaftesbury avenue, thence into the North London area.

Their Majesties, it was understood, wanted to drive through North London streets because that is one of the areas they have not toured during the coronation period.

They previously visited the People's Palace in the East End and drove through south and southeast London to visit the opening of the Greenwich National Maritime Museum.

Although the drive was entirely unannounced, the news spread rapidly. A half hour before the car arrived at Leather lane and Clerkenwell road, in the poorer working class district, the streets were jammed with thousands.

The people, bursting through police cordons, almost stopped the police car which preceded Their Majesties.

Hundreds of children, holding flags, made a lane for the limousine. The bobbies, standing at 15-yard intervals, could not restrain the crowd's enthusiasm.

Hurriedly-lettered banners, inscribed: "The Leather Lane Traders Greet Their Majesties," and "God Bless the King and Queen," were thrown across the roadway.

The royal couple were obviously pleased by the reception. But the Queen, just as obviously, was nervous about the children who poured into the street in front of the big car.

When the procession emerged from the Leather Lane, the struggling police had made a path just wide enough for the automobile.

All over the 14-mile route Their Majesties chose, it was the same—a living wall of cheering humanity.

$50 Camera Loss Payment Ends Rudy's Fracas

Crooner Rudy Vallee's fistic fracas with a Boston cameraman came to an amicable end in Suffolk Superior court today, when Harry Paul of Chelsea, New England representative for Irving Berlin and self-styled "publicity manager" for the orchestra leader, filed an accord and satisfaction.

Paul said that Benedict FitzGerald, newspaper photoghapher he was accused of striking after the cameraman had taken a picture of Vallee leaving a downtown theater with a girl, had agreed to drop the case after Paul paid $50 for damage to the camera.

An assault and battery charge brought by FitzGerald had been appealed to superior court after Paul was found guilty and ordered to pay a $50 fine in municipal court three weeks ago.

Rudy, protected by guards, sailed for England two weeks ago after he had been found guilty of assault in municipal court here, and his case placed on file.

His escape, however, did not protect him from further embarrassment in the case. The picture of the girl Photographer FitzGerald took was recognized by her husband, a Chattanooga (Tenn.) radio announcer, as his wife, Evelyn Gresham, a New York show girl, whom he is now suing for divorce.

Boy, 8, Apologizes For Calling Judge Sissy

Less than a month ago in Waltham juvenile court, an eight-year-old boy heard himself termed a stubborn child and then said to Judge George P. Sarsfield:

"You look like a sissy in that black blanket and I can beat you at marbles."

Judge Sarsfield decided that the boy ought to be transferred to another home temporarily. Today he was back in court and ready to return to his parents. The report said he was now a model boy.

This time the boy told the court:

"Excuse me for what I said the last time."

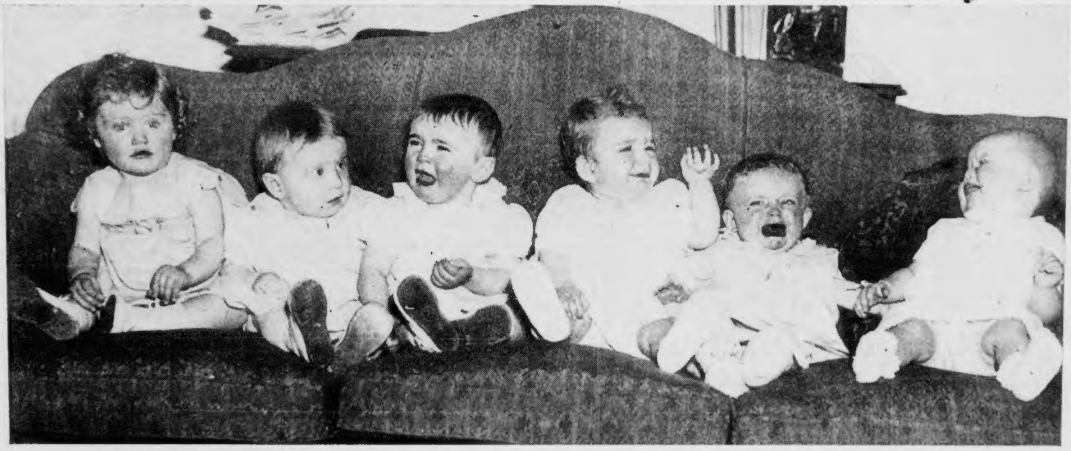
'Reunion' Babes More Concerned With Toys



Maybe because it's their first public appearance and they're just a little camera shy, but these six cute little girls hardly seem to be enjoying their "reunion" in the nurses' home of the New England Sanitarium and Hospital in Stoneham. Nevertheless, each portrays a different and striking study of expression. This novel "reunion" idea was originated at the hospital to bring together babies whose mothers met while in the hospital. This picture was taken shortly before each was given a toy. Left to right: Glemis Brewer, Audrey Moarehause, Catherine Horner, Norma Proctor, Helen Esson and Pauline Kinsella. Little Glemis seems to have her eyes already glued on the toys. Audrey is watching her mother intently. Catherine is—well, just unhappy. Norma, Helen and Pauline seem to wish they were in their mothers' arms instead.

Dorothy Kilgallen to Sister:

'Money, Traffic Go Fast in London'

By DOROTHY KILGALLEN

International News Service Staff Correspondent

London, May 13—A girl around London writes a letter to her sister in New York.

Dear Eleanor:

In London nothing goes fact except money and taxicabs—but money and taxicabs go like mad.

It is all very bewildering. I feel like a savage encountering civilization for the first time, and wanting to run back to the jungle where everything is peaceful.

Accustomed as I am only to the gentle winding of Manhattan traffic up Fifth avenue at noon, and the lazy streaming of motor cars down Broadway at night, I am terrified at what goes on in these London streets.

I spent 20 minutes this afternoon standing on the curb in Piccadilly Circus, trying to get courage enough to cross the street, but in the end I just hailed a taxi and rode around the block. Its more fun to ride in a careening taxi than get hit with one.

Actually, you never have seen such madness. The main streets have seven or eight lines of traffic, all going in different directions—and all, so far as I can determine, going in the wrong directions.

They crawl along for a few minutes in packed lines, then just when you creep up on them and bravely begin crossing the street, they all start to race wildly, knocking you down and running you over.

It seems to me I have been knocked down and run over two or three times every day, so far.

All the cars here look pretty strange, which makes it even more hectic. The cabs are unbelievable—tall black boxy affairs that look like hansom cabs without horses, and you can get a horse with your cab, too, if you insist.

The private cars are either midgets or Leviathans—mostly midgets—because there is a high tav here on horsepower. Give you my word I almost stepped on one yesterday in the heat of traffic.

The British adore fancy cars—white and cream-colored and robin's egg blue trimmed with a sort of mauve. I saw one elegant baby blue limousine with purple wheels and a chauffeur in white. If I catch any chauffeurs in pink, I will scream loudly.

But my favorite car in London is a gold-plated Rolls Royce. I have read about gold plated Rolls Royces, but I never hoped to see one. This one I see so often around Mayfair I think there must be two of them. Which I couldn't bear.

These loud and fancy motor cars give dash to the situation—sort of spice in the traffic jam, if you get what I mean. But I still resent being run over by them.

Aside from the traffic (and the money, which is too dreadful to discuss) everything moves with a slowness you wouldn't believe.

It takes a good five minutes to put through a telephone call. This may not seem a serious or important thing, but try taking up a receiver and having nothing happen for two or three minutes.

Then when the operator comes on and you give her your number, try waiting four or five minutes more before anything else happens.

You can waste a whole morning making four telephone calls—and I mean local calls, not calls to Shanghai or Bombay. But there's no hurrying an English telephone operator.

Public telephone booths, incidentally, are conveniently located in the middle of the streets, and painted red. Very jolly.

Service in the restaurants is incredibly slow and surprisingly bad. I expected it to be very good, but it can't compare with the service in first-rate New York restaurants. And I am talking about the best London eating places—places like the Berkeley and the Mayfair and the Ritz. The second-rate restaurants are horrible.

RIFT DELAYS HUDSON VOTE

Hudson, May 13—There came near being no special election here today, but after a two-hour delay in opening the polls, the "committee of 150" had to bow to the opposition, although reserving the right to protest the results.

The argument was over who had the privilege of reading the warrant authorizing the ballot for a new moderator and a new selectman. Both posts had been held by the late Dr. Fred Glazier.

Town Clerk Woodbury Parker started off proceedings by attempting to read the warrant. But Harry Madden, chairman of selectmen and town counsel, as well as candidate for moderator, banged the gavel so hard he drowned out Parker's voice.

Parker shouted louder and Madden banged harder. John W. Berquist, the "committee of 150" candidate for moderator, and Perley Heath, candidate for selectman and Berquist's running mate, together with their supporters, backed up Parker.

When the racket got so deafening that Police Chief Andrew Magorty and six patrolmen had to be called to restore order, the battling factions agreed to a temporary truce while a telephone call was made to Secretary of State Frederic W. Cook.

Secretary Cook advised that Madden might as well read the warrant so long as he was presiding, with the question of legality to be argued out later. But that didn't suit the "Committee of 150." So the row started all over again.

REUNION MARKS HOSPITAL DAY

Mothers and their babies met again today at the New England Sanitarium and Hospital, Stoneham, in celebration of National Hospital Day.

Although the observance was officially marked yesterday, officials at this hospital extended the "open house" festivities for one week.

One of the most interesting features is the "reunion" of babies whose mothers met while in the hospital.

Yesterday hundreds walked through the various departments and clinics of the hospital and enjoyed a program of music and refreshments. Hospital Day was observed throughout the country since May 12 marked the birthday of Florence Nightingale, British nurse of the Crimean war.

TELE.... (Coronation) ---VISION

30,000 CALL TEST SUCCESS

London, May 13 (AP)—Television took the coronation parade to some 30,000 persons far away from the actual scene, and today the consensus was it had been markedly successful.

Even so, officials of the British Broadcasting Company said if there had been sunshine instead of rain the pictures would have been 50 per cent better.

The "televiewers" saw the spectacle in the comfort of their homes, in offices, in motion picture theaters and in halls hired for the occasion.

It was like viewing a movie accompanied by a running commentary, but instead the watchers were witnessing what was going on at the very moment some distance way.

Because the television apparatus was installed at a vantage point at Hyde Park corne, near the end of the route, the "televiewers" were able to get better views of the procession than many of those on the spot, even though the rain began just before the broadcast started and continued throughout the hours of transmission.

King's Invitation Declined by Lindy

London, May 13 (AP)—Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh, it was learned today, declined an invitation to attend the coronation of King George VI yesterday at Westminster Abbey.

The noted aviator, friends said, was extended one of the invitations which thousands of personages had sought in vain but decided to stay at his home in Kent. He listened to the broadcast of the ceremony.

History Repeated

Ghosts of Past Watch Crowning

By SIR PHILIP GIBBS

(Noted British Author and Historian)

Copyright 1937, by Universal Service. All rights reserved in the United States. Reproduction in whole or in part strictly prohibited.

London, May 13—We who sat long hours in Westminster Abbey saw a noble pageant and solemn ritual with a series of richly colored figures like an illuminated scroll brought to life.

What is its meaning in this modern world?

Is it more than a fairy tale of olden times?

Yes, all English history was in it and something reaching far back in the faith and spirit of the people who from this little island went out in ships across the seas, built new nations and carried their speech and liberties to far lands.

From these countries overseas children of the old mother came to do homage to a king who is theirs. The past called to the present with a message of good hope and good will to an unknown future.

In the old Abbey when I went to my place very early in the morning there was a murmurous quietude. Through the open doors I could hear sounds of the multitude outside moving like millions of ghosts in the damp twilight of this May day dawn.

Scene of Magic

Inside it was very dim at first with the lamps glimmering like stars between grey columns. Presently the high Abbey windows brightened. Shafts of cold white light struck aslant the great nave and touched some of the pillars and arches. Rose petals glowed in the painted windows.

One could see the magic of the scene which was set for royal drama.

All along the highway of the nave was spread a blue carpet. It reached to a high stage where an altar stood. Here the carpet was of tawny color turned to old gold in the flood of golden light from the many lamps.

Facing the altar was a worm-eaten wooden chair—the chair of the Saxon Edward, king and saint—with its seat above the Stone of Scone, whose story goes back into mists of legend as old as time.

Nearby were two crimson chairs such as those used by the merrie monarch and his ladies; and two faldstools where the King and Queen would kneel before the altar.

On the altar itself there was the gleam of crowns, swords, scepters, spurs. Further toward the nave there was a high dais with two royal thrones, the King's throne raised two steps higher than that of the Queen.

Places had been made for 8000 people in high tiers of boxes reaching almost to the height of the pointed arches and draped in gold and blue, worked with tudor roses and the royal arms.

Those who came to take these places were the gentry of this realm—political and social leaders, law makers, wealth makers and many groups of our American, Australian, Canadian and other kinsfolk beyond the seas. They were led to their places by elegant young men called goldstaffs, who were very helpful.

Playlike Scene

Thousands of these guests were in court dress and all manner of uniforms—scarlet and gold; blue and gold; white and gold; black silk breeches, white stockings and shining stars. Women glittered with diamonds, their gowns had the sheen of apple blossoms and spring flowers.

To these places as I watched them come, went great soldiers and sailors who had served in war not very far back in history. I had seen some of them before in dirty trenches. They wore orders of valor and service.

All the people who pull the strings of our puppet play were within these gray old walls.

Down below I saw the hundreds of choristers in white surplices and crimson cassocks—women in white like medieval nuns—who went in slow procession to the choir.

Busy about the altar moved bishops and clergy in rich capes stiff with gold thread.

It was a scene out of one of Shakespeare's plays, vivid, rich and beautiful.

After a long while peers and peeresses of the realm arrived. Some of them had come to Westminster by barge in the damp of the dawn; others by three-penny train on the underground; others by car through the massed and bedraggled crowds. But they looked as if they had just come out of the middle ages.

The peers wore their long robes of purple and red velvet with capes of ermine and held their coronets under their arms as knights used to carry their helmets. Some of them were very old and stumbled in their robes. Some of them were very young, jaunty and debonair.

Famous Names

The velvet gowns of the peeresses touched the stones of the floorway and they carried their little coronets like vanity bags. Among them one saw pretty young faces and the grace of English beauty as Shakespeare saw it once.

Some of these people bear old names famous in history. Some of them still live in old castles and houses on lands held by their forefathers, who fought for their kings in English, French or Scottish fields.

But the roll call of the peerage now is crowned with new names of new men who have gained their titles by modern ways of service. They looked as noble as did those of the bluest blood.

Through the open doorways came very faintly the music of military bands. Inside the abbey the organ played gloriously, like heavenly music, and its notes vibrated through this forest in stone. There was a rushing noise like a silver cascade as escorts of cavalry clattered outside.

The boxes in the galleries were now filled. This old shrine was crowded with life from which came the murmur of voices though no footfall could be heard on the carpeted stones.

But as I waited for the coming of the King and Queen I was aware of old ghosts about me. I heard in my mind the old voices of the past as far back as the Saxon craftsmen, whose stonework still stands in some of these walls. Here on that worm-eaten chair many Kings and Queens have been crowned. Thirteen of them lie buried here. Among them are lion men and tiger men, very fierce and cruel.

The Norman William strode to this place in his chain mail. Richard with his great sword at his side came here for his crown though he spoke no English. The early Edwards had helped to build this abbey as we now see it. They had held their kingdom by sword and battle axe.

Henry of Agincourt, a friend of low fellows in his youth, stared down this nave with his falcon eyes. All the great figures of our story came here for a little while like shadows passing: saints and heroes and villains; fair women with tears in their hearts for the world's cruelties in times of passion, murder, plague, war, and the unending struggle for life by our forebears.

By some spirit in them for a thousand years they were greatly daring in adventure. Then another one began with the crowning of a new king in this dangerous age.

Surely these spirits of the past haunted the Abbey when he came.

There was a living ghost here in many people's minds. It was impossible not to think of him now and then. It was the invisible presence of Edward VIII who was proclaimed King not long ago but did not come to his crowning. He laid down all things for another way of life after a tragic struggle in his soul.

Many Religions

Here and there I caught a glimpse of oriental princes in white or silken headdresses. The sword of Islam saluted a Christian King. Here were chiefs whose people are black under African skies and whose drums are beating in jungles today.

Here were sultans of dark skinned folk under the suzerain rule of King George. Here within these grey walls were great princes and rajahs of Indian states with marble palaces and teeming cities. They are the rulers and representatives of 400,000,000 people who dwell under the far-off glamour of this British crown raised as a symbol above many races, creeds, and ways of human life.

The blood royal of Europe walked this way in many uniforms—crown princes and princesses of many kingdoms which still exist after the downfall of many dynasties.

Among these foreign visitors I looked out specially for the face of a soldier whom I had last seen on the battlefields of France twenty years ago. It was General Pershing of the United States, who has grown whiter since I met him like others who were in the last war.

Through the tumult outside, growing louder and more excited, came two little girls like fairy princesses. Princess Elizabeth bore herself gallantly with sparkling eyes. Upon that little head one day will be placed that heavy crown. There will be another Elizabethan era: Perhaps—who knows?—with another great flow of genius, vitality and splendor of spirit.

Human Rosebud

By her sister's side was little Princess Margaret like a rosebud of the springtime of Chaucer's England.

Other princesses and noble ladies were in this company, making a pretty picture for any painter's eye.

Then Queen Mary came with the Queen of Norway and all the Abbey guests were moved with an affection which she must have felt. I remember her when she herself was crowned and when her eyes seemed to burn with the light of her own jewels. Now an old lady, rather tired perhaps, but glad that things had gone well after all, she waited for her son.

He was soon coming now, it seemed.

The archbishops, bishops and clergy went down now in solemn procession to the west door to await their majesties. Organ music and trumpets filled the Abbey with a tremendous sound of gladness.

The fresh young voices of choristers burst into song. Beyond the open door was the tumult of a great cavalcade, an excited multitude, storms of cheers and waves of music. We could only guess at that picture and that noise.

Where we sat there was a crash of silver trumpets shattering through the nave up to the high arches. It was a fanfare of triumph as though blown by Arthur's knights in an elfin world.

George and Elizabeth had come

Grand Duchess Marie

Coronation Scene One of Grandeur

(Grand Duchess Marie, who witnessed the dazzling coronation of Russia's last Czar when she was a little girl, tells herewith her impressions of the coronation of Britain's King George VI as she saw it from the press box in Westminster Abbey.)

By GRAND DUCHESS MARIE

(World copyright 1937, by Universal Service. Reproduction in whole or part prohibited.)

London, May 13—I am still dazzled.

For many hours I lived in a fantastic, mediaeval tale come to life—or was it a dream? Now that the beautiful spectacle is over I can't tell that I have returned again to normal existence.

My memory will forever retain the picture of this man and his wife who have attained the highest place in the scale of human honors.

The young King bore himself with unbelievable calmness and strength throughout the nerve-wracking ordeal of the coronation ceremony and his feat is greater when one remembers that he is a shy man.

His consort went through the service with that same grace and simplicity that made her a beloved Queen.

Westminister Abbey, the revered shrine of the English where 37 of their kings have been crowned, was unrecognizable. Gone was its grim severity and like everything else in this city it was in festive array.

From where I sat in the north transept of Poet's corner with the galleries facing me between two tall Gothic pillars and balustrades decorated in heavy blue and yellow brocade, it looked like a scene from the middle ages.

Arrive in Waves

Below me in the center of the church was a theater stage, a platform with two thrones facing the altar thrones, upon which the King and Queen sat during the second part of the service. Five shallow steps led to the King's throne, only three to the Queen's. Her throne stood slightly to one side.

Between two pillars leading to the altar I could see the royal box draped in pale yellow silk. A thick yellow carpet covered the entire floor space. My place was in the gallery. We had to gather earlier than anyone else and I watched how little by little the cathedral was filling with people.

Below the royal box was a raised stone tablet bearing a magnificent array of gold plate, including trays of shining goblets and cups.

They arrived in waves—according to the places in which they were assigned to sit and according to their importance. The last ones to arrive before the members of the royal family were the peers and peeresses. They inundated the place with the brilliant scarlet of their robes and mantels.

The peers sat in rows under the southern transept and by craning my neck over the seats in front of me I could just see the backs of the peeresses in the first row who were sitting directly below our gallery.

All of them wore tiaras, tight fitting dresses of crimson velvet with white down front and capes of ermine. Four of the peeresses sat slightly apart from the rest. They were those who carried the Queen's canopy.

Gorgeous Sight

Although there was bustling movement in the abbey all through the long hours we had to wait, the first real stir came with the appearance of the royal family and royal guests.

A charming sight to behold was the princess royal with the two little princesses on either side.

The princess royal was wearing a long purple train and the girls had short ones of the same shade. They took up their places near the center of the theater where three chairs were placed for them.

Last of the group to arrive were Queen Mary and Queen Maud of Norway. As they passed toward the royal box, the princess royal and her two small companions rose from their chairs and curtsied deeply. Then familiar words of greeting were exchanged between Queen Mary, her daughter and granddaughters.

As soon as the Queen Mother Mary was seated, the Princess Royal and the children took up new places in the front row of the royal box.

Princess Elizabeth showed her intense interest throughout the ceremony, but the long day proved too much for little 6-year-old Margaret Rose. Towards the end of the ceremony she dropped her fair head in exhaustion upon the balustrade of the box.

Her 11-year-old sister nudged her sharply back to attention. I watched both of them as they put on their coronets the moment their mother was crowned. The coronets seemed to pre-occupy them during the ceremony and Elizabeth said to a friend upon returning to the palace:

"My coronet is too big for me. It slipped over my nose twice."

The church then came to life. The atmosphere was beginning to get tense.

Guns Booming

All Westminster was conscious of the arrival of the sovereign. It was as if an electric spark had gone through the audience. Conversations ceased—Everything down below came to a standstill. People drew themselves up. Faces became grave, expressions took on the pinched look of concentration.

All heads turned towards the nave. We knew the King and Queen were being received at the door by the Earl Marshal heading a brilliant throng of statesmen and prelates of the church.

Somewhere guns were booming, military bands were playing. A great blare of trumpets told us when the King was about to cross the threshold of the cathedral.

First there came the chaplain of Westminster Abbey, followed by the Dean who together with the Archbishop of Canterbury was to conduct the service. After the dean came bishops, archbishops and great officers of state, all in robes and uniforms of their offices.

It was a stately prelude to what was to follow. Then came the Queen's procession. At its head were three heralds carrying their emblazoned pennants. Next came three peers carrying the Queen's regalia—a crown, sceptre and ivory rod.

Then came the Queen herself walking between two supporting bishops.

All eyes went to her as she came into sight. She looked incredibly little and dainty in her sumptuous robes and to me there was something almost touching in the little dark fringe on the forehead of her young pale face.

She was visibly moved. Although outwardly composed, I could see she was trembling with emotion. Her robe, made at the Royal School of Embroidery, was of purple velvet about six yards long. It was covered with gold embroidery representing the various emblems of the British Empire.

Strange Contrast

On the upper portion of the robe was a double "E" surmounted by a crown. The train was edged with ermine and was carried by six young girls, all of whom wore dresses of white satin and diamond tiaras of identical design.

Immediately behind the Queen walked the mistress of the robes in a long crimson train embroidered with gold and the gold letter "E" in each of the corners. The mistress of the robes was followed by ladies in waiting and members of the Queen's court.

Then there was a slight pause. A wave of intense excitement and emotion swept through the audience.

Another procession pouring in from the nave—a still more brilliant procession. It was preceded by more heralds, men in robes, peers carrying numerous regalia, and peers those hereditary right it was to perform coronation functions.

The King entered. He was dressed entirely in scarlet velvet, with his scarlet velvet cap of maintenance on his head. His train was borne by six pages dressed exactly alike.

Quavering, with my heart in my throat, my pulse racing, I watched the incredible picture. I had seen one coronation before this one—a long time ago—and my thoughts flew back to it in spite of myself.

Although I was not five years old at the time of our last czar's coronation in Moscow, that glittering spectacle has stamped itself on my memories of childhood.

It was in strangely different circumstances that I was watching my second coronation. As I looked upon the serious young face of the King, I thought of all the responsibility he was assuming and his supreme sacrifice to duty by which this coronation was to be a consecration.

Ghosts of Past At Crowning at last. They were led forward by high officers of state: dukes, marquesses, earls.

As master of all this ceremony was young Norfolk, hereditary earl marshal, son of that black-bearded duke whom I had seen here when George V was crowned.

The King wore his cap of state and royal mantle of imperial purple with a long train supported by his young noble pages. He bore himself with fine dignity and simplicity. He had come willingly to this dedication for service and duty.

The Queen was good to see, with softness and glamour in her eyes.

The spirits of many fair queens must have walked with her. To this ordeal never in her girlhood dreams had she been brought by destiny, and I remember that in her veins there is the blood of Scottish kings as far back as Robert the Bruce. Her train was very long and rich and was carried by six young beauties who looked like maids of honor to one of Henry's Queens in Tudor England.

They have now had its full living picture, wonderful, rich in glowing color, full of movement and drama. The nave is lined with the king's gentlemen of arms with their tall halberds, and by yeomen of the guard in scarlet and gold Tudor caps as when fat Henry led Anne Boleyn to this altar.

Slowly, like the unrolling of a painted scroll, this living picture pageant went up to the high stage to solemn and lovely music,

Pity Poor Achilles

This Little Pig Had a Nervous Breakdown

ALL BECAUSE HE COULDN'T MAKE UP HIS MIND

Pittsburgh, May 13 (AP)—Achilles, a pig at Cornell University, has developed a nervous breakdown, the first ever recorded in a pig.

Achilles broke down, the American Psychiatric Association was informed today, because he couldn't make up his mind, when placed in a pen scientifically arranged to appear as difficult to Achilles as the world of men's problems appears to human beings at the time they have nervous breakdowns.

Achilles' mind went back on him while considering certain problems of food. An apple was the direct cause of his downfall.

In his scientific pen was a box with a closed lid, and an apple in it. But the apple was like Three-Card-Monte, sometimes it was there, sometimes it wasn't.

Achilles had to decide by listening to a buzzer and by now and then feeling a slight electric tingle from a wire fastened to his leg. By various combinations these told him that sometimes the apple was there, sometimes it wasn't. He could have the apple in lifting the lid with his snout.

Achilles was hungry and in plain English "didn't give a damn" about the signals for a long time. He took a chance and often won an apple.

But at last his keeper refused to put an apple in the box unless and until Achilles guessed right. That was too much for this pig.

"The animal," said Dr. Howard Scott Liddell of Cornell, who reported the study, "was forced to come to a decision and to act on it."

A few days of these hair-trigger decisions and Achilles had the nervous breakdown. It was a whopper. He would lay his snout on the cover, close his eyes and stand rigid growling for a whole hour. In these "hours" of indecision even placing an apple on his nose failed to make Achilles stir or eat.

The scientific purpose is to discover the causes of human breakdowns. Previously Dr. Liddell proved that sheep break down when faced with too difficult decisions. He proved also that this too great mental effort permanently damaged the sheep's brains and nerves.

Pigs having highly complicated nervous systems as compared with sheep were chosen for the second step.

"We believe," said Dr. Liddell, "that the experimental neurosis is caused by the equivalent of a human conflict situation.

"In mental disorder (human) the background of ethical standards, social tradition and personal obligation and the like is too intricate for us to perceive clearly the essential biological features of the pattern of action which has been disrupted or to analyze quantitatively the conditions responsible for the damage."

FISHER PLANT CLOSED BY SIT

Cleveland, May 13 (INS)—The Fisher Body plant here, a large General Motors unit employing 7000, was closed down today by a sit-down strike.

Lincoln R. Scafe, manager, reported the plant closed down after 14 men in the "knockdown shipping" department started a sit-down which he charged was a violation of the pact reached by General Motors and the United Automobile Workers.

The sit-down spread to other departments, forcing issuance of the order to close the plant, Scafe said. He was unable to estimate how many men remained in the plant or how many left.

Scafe said the company would not negotiate with the strikers as long as they remained in the plant.

Woman Leader Dies

Geneva, Switzerland, May 13 (AP)—Mrs. Clara Guthrie d'Arcis, who founded and became president of the World Union of Women for International Concord, died yesterday. A native of Louisiana, she had lived in Geneva for 20 years.

SANTA SITTERS DEFY STATE

Springfield, May 13—Four hundred and fifty workers in the "Santa Claus sit-down strike" at the plant of the Milton Bradley Company today spurned a "recommendation" of Commisioner of Labor and Industries James T. Moriarty that they leave the premises.

The strike in the company's plant, where games and Christmas toys are manufactured, developed yesterday into a "sitdown," a form of demonstration which Governor Hurley warned several weeks ago in a speech at the Harvard Club in Boston would not be tolerated in this state.

The open defiance by the strikers came in the form of a vote after Mayor Henry Martens appealed to Commissioner Moriarty over the telephone to take steps to attempt to settle the strike.

Moriarty, according to the mayor, suggested that both sides meet tonight and also recommended that the strikers, in the meantime, leave the plant.

Told by Miss Janet Hersey, a CIO official, of the message, the strikers voted to remain in the plant until an agreement has been reached. They seek recognition of the CIO as a collective bargaining agency.

Through counsel, Theodore V. Quinlivan, the company stated it would not attend any meeting aimed at conciliation until the strikers vacated.

Earlier today Governor Hurley ordered Commissioner Moriarty to "make an immediate investigation" of the strike.

The strike started as a "joke" The workers decided to shut off the power for 15 minutes as a "demonstration of strength."

But when they wanted to return to work they found the management had turned off the main switches.

30,000 Quit in CIO Steel Strike; Gas Hurled

at Aliquippa declared the pickets, shouting and snake-dancing in the streets, refused to permit him and two other officers to remain at the scene.

POLICE HURL GAS

"We were shoved about and threatened," he said, "and then I called five or six other patrolmen and we fired some gas."

Pittsburgh, steel capital of the world, became tense as Philip Murray, chairman of John L. Lewis' SWOC, called an executive committee meeting here Saturday to plan strategy for a vigorous campaign on the other "Big Five" independents who have refused to grant CIO contracts. At the same time the rank and file of the SWOC was ordered to hold itself in readiness for eventualities.

A conference will be held late today between Murray, H. E. Lewis, chairman of the Jones and Laughlin board, and James Francis Dewey, Federal conciliator, the SWOC announced today.

The Jones and Laughlin strike was the first major walkout in the district in years.

Two men were injured in the brief skirmish at Aliquippa, according to first reports.

CLUBBING CHARGED

Clifford Short, secretary of the Aliquippa SWOC, charged one of the injured was clubbed by police. Joseph Timko, WOC director, asserted:

"If that is the way they want it, that is the way they'll have it."

Mrs. Mary Sample, 25, wife of a striker, was arrested on an assault and battery charge preferred by Chief Ambrose, who said she struck him. The chief's story in brief:

"We went to the south gate to look over the situation. We were on the bridge when the pickets began to hoot and call us names. Then Mrs. Sample started at me, struck me and said: 'You shan't leave this bridge.'

"I answered: 'Well, I will if I want to. We came here on a peaceful survey and have a right here.'

"The pickets then surrounded us, still shouting. I rushed into the plant and asked J. & L. police to phone for more of our patrolmen. They came on the run and we fired tear gas at them. I would say about five or six charges. That dispersed them."

GIRLS ON PICKET LINE

Just before the strike became effective, the huge open hearths and Bessemer converter flares died out. Ingot stripping cranes and the blooming mills ended their noisy hammering.

The J. & L. Steel payroll of $175,000 a day stopped, too.

CIO Starts to Organize 200,000 Ford Workers

Chicago, May 13 (US)—Claiming that Ford Motor Company workers in many plants are 100 per cent unionized, Homer S. Martin, head of the United Automobile Workers of America, said here that negotiation with Henry Ford for union recognition would start soon. He added that the long heralded drive to organize all of Ford's 200,000 hands is now under way.

Costumers Sign Pact With Film Producers

Hollywood, May 13 (AP)—Producers signed union costumers to a four-year working agreement today and claimed they actually had increased production since a strike of Federated Motion Picture Crafts Workers started 13 days ago.

Crafts spokesmen, placing hope for victory on a so far unrealized nationwide boycott of movie theaters, answered the producers by presenting to Dr. Towne Nylander, regional director for the National Labor Relations Board, evidence they said constituted "coercion and intimidation" of strikers.

AVIATION DAY WINS HELP

Washington, May 13 (US)—Enactment of the Shanley bill authorizing President Roosevelt to proclaim May 28 as national aviation day was enthusiastically urged in a report on file with the House by its judiciary committee.

Drafted by Rep. Citron (D) of Connecticut, the report stated:

"Your committee believes that the issuance of a proclamation by the President, designating May 28, 1937, as national aviation day, and inviting the people of the United States to observe this day with appropriate exercises, will stimulate an interest in aviation from the viewpoint of national defense and of transportation in peace times.

"Aviation has made great strides since its inception. The steps taken from time to time, to make our people airminded, will help the advancement of the science of aviation.

"Congress has ample precedent for the passage of this resolution. By resolution Congress has thus designated Army Day and Navy Day, patriotically dedicated to those branches of the national defense.

"The passage of this resolution will place aviation in a position of importance. Your committee decided upon May 28 for this observance because of the information that weather conditions on that date are approximately the most favorable in all parts of the United States for flying purposes."

Shades of Gay 90's

Atlantic City, N. J., May 13 (AP)—William Shorts, 42, was arrested on a charge of "riding a bicycle while intoxicated."

Policeman Howard Lewis charged the bicycle crashed into a parked automobile.

PLEADS GUILTY IN CRIME RING

George Varney, 19, of Norfolk street, Roxbury, on trial with two other men in Suffolk Superior Court in connection with the activities of an alleged auto-theft ring, pleaded guilty to all charges after the government had rested its case today.

The indictments against Varney charged him with armed robbery, breaking and entering, carrying a weapon in a car under his control, larceny of 14 automobile plates, larceny of an automobile, and possession of burglar's tools.

Trial of two other defendants, Francis O'Connor, 26, of Hillside street, Roxbury, and John D. Griffin, 28, of Townsend street, Roxbury, continued.

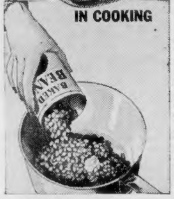
The Flavor Test for Mustard
Prepared Mustard GULDEN'S Charles Gulden, New York

ON COLD CUTS



IN COOKING

Clever cooks are learning that the best way to tell real quality in mustard is to use it in cooking. They have discovered Gulden's is the finest flavored Prepared Mustard for cold meats, sandwiches and frankfurters—also that it's the only mustard that blends perfectly with food even in cooking.

Try this easy recipe: Add 2 to 3 tablespoons of Gulden's and one tablespoon sugar to a can of baked beans. Heat or bake for 15 minutes in saucepan or baking dish. Your husband will exclaim, "At last, real home-baked beans!"

ZEP'S RUDDERS LASHED, SAYS INQUIRY WITNESS

Lakehurst, N. J., May 13 (INS)—Testimony indicating that the dirigible Hindenburg was in trouble before the explosion that destroyed it was given today to the Federal Board of Inquiry by Chief Boatswain's Mate F. J. Tobin of the ground crew.

Tobin said he saw an "emergency tackle" hooked to the lower rudder and part of the control system of the ship as it sailed over the airport last Thursday evening.

This, he declared, seemed to have been done "in a hurry"—possibly because of a break in the control cable.

Tobin's suggestion that a broken steering cable might have thrashed around inside the Hindenburg and in some manner caused a spark to ignite the gas cells interested the board of inquiry.

RUDDER OUT O FLINE

"The ship was over the ground crew before it turned toward the mooring mast," said Tobin. "The top rudden was three of four degrees off and I knew both rudders should have been synchronized.

"I first saw a smoking flame aft and then I heard a noise which I likened to a breaking wire. The men on the starboard side stood appalled for a moment and then tried to get out from under.

"I ran forward. We noticed the ship still over our heads and we ran to our left. By that time the tail was on the ground. There appeared to be nothing irregular with the motors."

Under questioning by Dennis Mulligan of the board, Tobin said:

"As the Hindenburg was making ready to land, two of my men asked me if I noticed the top rudder was hard right. I said to them it didn't look that way to me—that the rudder looked to be amidship. The ship seemed to be executing a continuing left turn.

SAW SMOKE, FLAME

"As the ship approached the ground chew I saw a burst of flame out of the tail aft of the engine and forward of the fin.

"First there was smoke and flame, accompanied by what I likened to the breaking of wires and girders."

Q—(By Mulligan) Did you make any observation of the rudder after the wreck? A—Yes. I noticed a part of the control system in the fin had a small tackle atached to it.

Q—What did it look like to you? A—It looked as though it was nothing permanent. It looked like an emergency measure—done in a hurry.

Q—What was the purpose of tackle? A—It might have been too much slack on that member of the control cable. This tackle was applied to remove the slack. I'm not familiar enough with the handling of the ship by the Germans to say why it was put on. It prevented the rudder from swinging from side to side and if the control cable broke, this tackle would bring it up taut.

HE HEARD EXPLOSIONS

Lieutenant Richard S. Andrews, U. S. N., an assistant mooring officer, testified earlier that bright sparks from the reversed port aft motor immediately preceded the explosion.

"The sparks were thrown off in an exhaust stream," Lieutenant Andrews testified, "I first saw a yellow flame—it had a bluish tinge—and came from the aft part of the ship.

"Almost simultaneously I heard an explosion. It had the sound of a shell bursting, the sound of gunpowder going off.

"The flame was of a shooting character. There was a hissing sound with the flame. I think it was that of the fabric burning.

"Then followed the big explosion."

Flier's Charge of Plane Sniping in N. Y. Probed

Bendix, N. J., May 13 (AP)—Police of nearby municipalities said today that they had failed to trace the sniper who struck a plane with a bullet as it flew over Rutherford May 2.

They said they knew of only one plane sniping, whereas Clarence Chamberlin, transatlantic flier formerly of this place, said in Spartanburg, S. C., last night that two planes at the airport landed here in recent weeks with bullet holes.

He said "something of the sort might explain" the Hindenburg disaster.

The plane struck by a bullet May 2 had left Clifton Airport and landed here for repair of minor damage caused by the slug. Peter Tomnie, who operates Clifton Airport, said he received a telephone threat from an unidentified man that if planes continued to fly low over Rutherford he would "riddle them with bullets."

Edward Gorski, manager of Standard Aviation, Inc., which operates Bendix Airport, said he knew of only the one plane sniping.

This municipality is about 60 miles from Lakehurst where the Zeppelin Hindenburg blew up with a loss of 35 lives.

Chamberlin, who stopped in Spartanburg on a flight from Florida to New York, said airport authorities were investigating the shooting of "the two planes" and added that the pilots did not know the shots were fired.

Airships from the U. S. Naval Air Station at Lakehurst also have been targets for sniping riflemen in the past.

1000 BASQUE TROOPS SLAIN

Salamanca, Spain, May 13 (INS)—One thousand Basque troops were killed when insurgent forces captured the Bizcargi range on the Biscay front, an official rebel communique stated today.

The slaughter occurred, according to the statement, when the nationalists trapped a loyalist battalion in the mountains, outflanked it, and then annihilated it almost to a man.

The loyalists were repulsed with severe losses when they launched an attack on Cilleruelo Bircia, on the Santander front, the communique stated, and 125 loyalists were killed when they attacked on the southern Tagus sector near Toledo.

Youth Confesses Killing Watchman

New York, May 13 (AP)—Police Captain John G. Stein announced today that Irving Bar, 20, Brooklyn, had confessed the hammer slaying of Joseph Geiger, night watchman.

Geiger's body was found in a Bronx department store yesterday morning, with two blood stained machinist's hammers by its side. Police said Bar, also employed in the store, said he beat the 61-year-old watchman to death when Geiger caught him stealing Tuesday night.

Woman Learning To Drive Injured

A 64-year-old woman driver, just learning to drive, and her instructor suffered cuts and bruises today when their car went out of control on Hammond's pond parkway near Beacon street, Newton, and crashed over a steep embankment 100 feet from the highway.

The driver, Harriet R. Cross of Commonwealth avenue, Allston, and her instructor, Joseph Allen, 39, of Vesta road, Dorchester, were taken to Newton hospital in a police ambulance.

THE BRIGHTER SIDE — Hubbell's Record — By Damon Runyon

(Copyright, 1937, by King Features Syndicate, Inc. International copyright and all other rights reserved.)

Our old pals, the New York baseball writers, are encroaching upon one of our favorite baseball records in a manner that impels us to protest.

Damon Runyon

They are endeavoring to ordain Mr. Carl Hubbell, of Oklahoma, with equal honors in the matter of consecutive games won, with that stalwart of another day, Monsieur Richar' de Marquee de Marquar', better known to baseball fame as Rube Marquard.

Mr. Carl Hubbell is a left-handed pitcher with young Mr. Horace Stoneham's New York Giants. Mr. Hubbell is unique among the left-handers of history, in that he does not think left-handed. This species of left-handed pitcher is extremely rare.

Mr. Marquard was a left-handed pitcher with the Giants of a bygone day, but he violated none of the traditions of left-handed pitching. He thought left-handed.

In his baseball heyday, this Mr. Marquard was a tall, slim, willowly fellow, slightly knock-kneed, and quite wry-necked.

Whip Lash Arm

He had a left arm like a whip lash. He could sling a jumper past the batsmen so fast that the boys never had time to get the old musket off their shoulders before the ball was in the mitt of Mr. John J. Tortes, who was known as Chief Myers.

Today Mr. Marquard still is tall, and still is wry-necked, but his form lacks the willowiness of the days in which he pitched the Giants to 19 consecutive victories, which is the record the New York baseball writers are now trying to purloin for Mr. Hubbell.

As a baseball contemporary of Mr. Marquard, and still a steady customer of his when he is following his present tranquil pursuit of dealing those pasteboards from behind the wicket of the $2 window at the pari-mutuel race tracks, we call upon the writers, in the name of justice, to cease this nefarious endeavor.

Hubbell Beaten

Mr. Marquard won his 19 consecutive victories in one National League playing season. Mr. Hubbell won 16 straight in the league playing season of 1936, a nice little record, at that, in these days when baseball has less hair on its chest. The season ended as Mr. Hubbell compiled his 16th victory.

Then came the World Series with the Yankees, and Mr. Hubbell won one game. Then he got knocked off in another game.

As we recall the matter, the baseball writers of New York were calling Mr. Hubbell's first victory his 17th straight, and that was all right with us, but when he got belted loose from his girdle, the lads set up an uproar that World Series games do not count in consecutive runs.

Well, that was all right with us, too. We were willing to let Mr. Hubbell go at 16 straight, or even 17, but since the opening of the 1937 season he has won four games, and the New York baseball writers are trying to add them to his tally, and give him 20 straight.

Hocus-Pocus Mark

They have most considerately dug up a victory from the season preceding Mr. Marquard's notable run and added it to Mr. Marquard's record, allowing him 20 straight, and a tie with Mr. Hubbell, but we are sure that Mr. Marquard himself will repudiate this warmed-over game, and stand upon his 19 straight on the one season, the all-time consecutive victory pitching record, held jointly by Mr. Marquard and Mr. Tim O'Rourke.

Come, come, Mr. Bill Slocum, and Mr. Bud Rennie, and Mr. Dan Daniels, and you other New York baseball writers! Come, come, come, come!

You know very well that baseball records of this kind belong to one single season, and that they cannot overlap another season. Let us have no hocus-pocus about this season.

Baseball records are to us sacred institutions. In our time as a baseball writer, we would have shuddered at the very thought of using any sleight-of hand with them, except perhaps when some favorite pitcher had a no-hit game, all but one measly little scratcher registered against him in an early inning, and it became necessary to expunge this blow to make it a no-hitter.

This was done by giving some bloke an error, but it was all open and above board. There was nothing tricky about it, and we hold that it added to the glamour of baseball.

The bloke who was accorded the error might beef a bit about it under his breath, but in those days blokes beefed about errors even when they had them coming to them, so what was the difference?

Rube's Great Pitch

We remember that when Mr. Marquard was composing his amazing record, there was some criticism about the circuit that Mr. McGraw was feeding him cripples.

We are only sorry that Mr. Marquard is not out here now buzzing that jumper past the boys.

The only drawback would be that Mr. Marquard, as he was in the days when he won the 19 straight, would have scared all the ball players of this era out of the yard with his jumpers, and then we would have had no baseball game.

He would have frightened all the baseball writers who are trying to swipe his record into hiding behind shutters by the velocity of his delivery, and we would have had no report on the game that did not take place.

On the whole, we guess it is just as well that Mr. Marquard is out of action, but we still insist that the lads lay off that record.

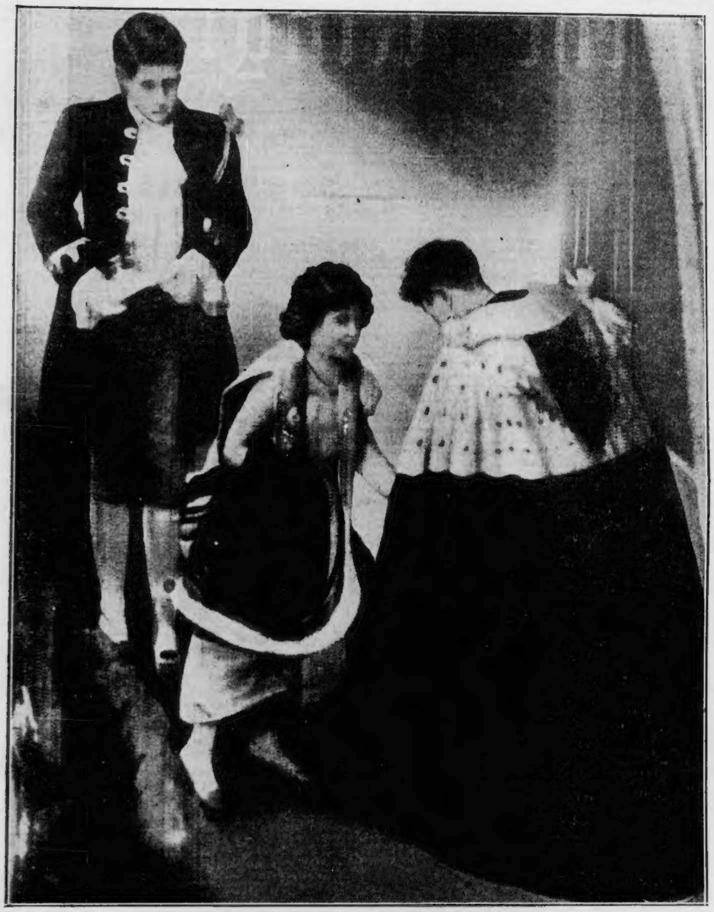
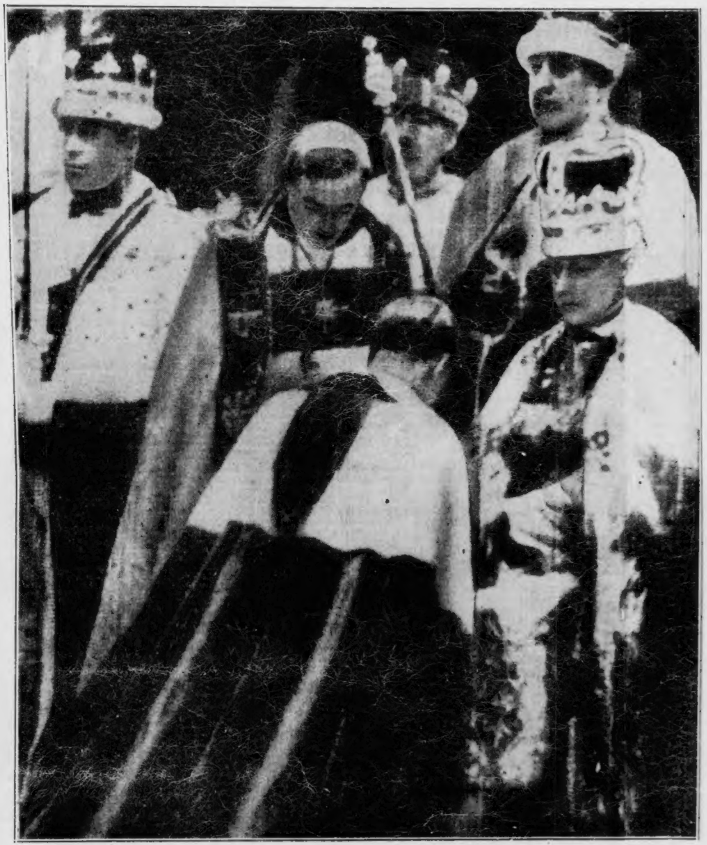
SOUND INP PHOTO

TIME HONORED RITUAL — In ancient Westminster Abbey, where England's illustrious dead lie entombed and where, on this occasion, England's living great are gathered, the venerable Archbishop of Canterbury prepares to place the massive gold and jewelled crown of Edward the Confessor on the head of King George VI.

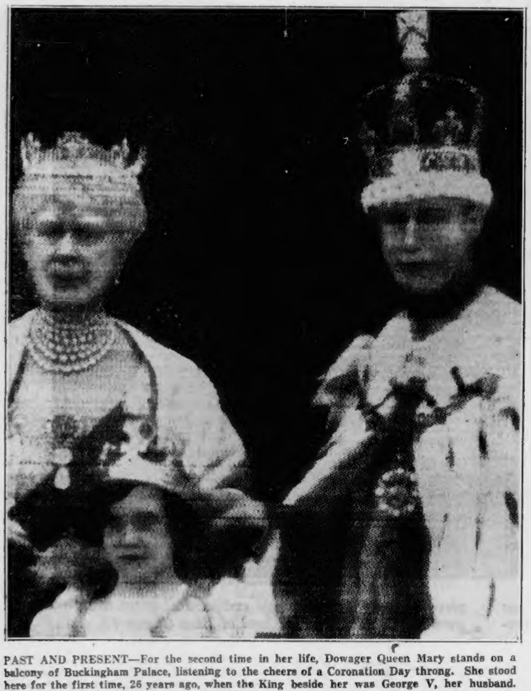
LONDON SEES RE-ENACTMENT OF CENTURIES-OLD PAGEANT



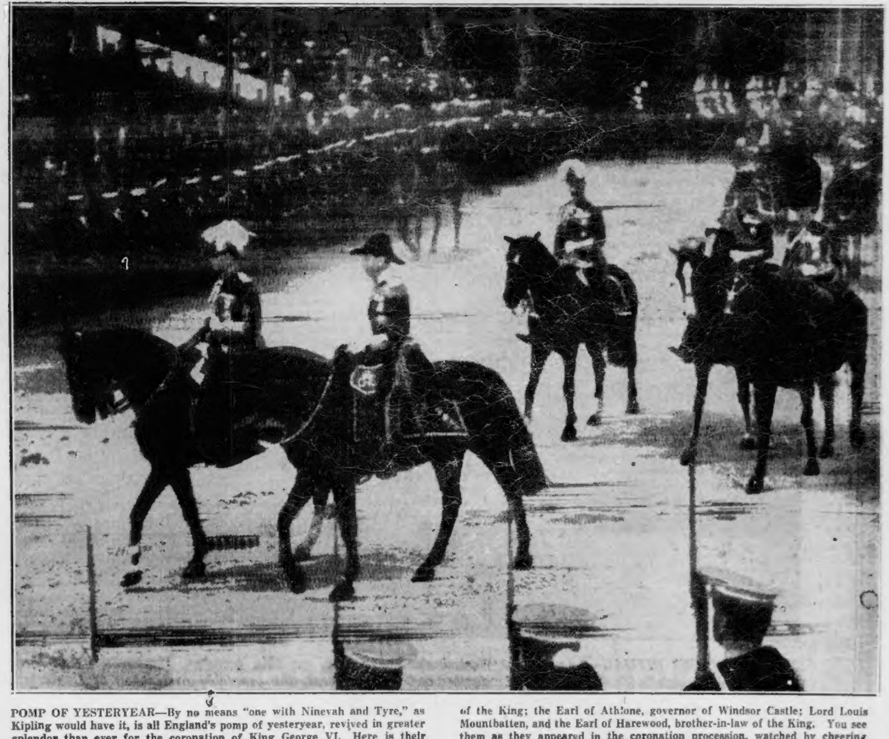
Smiling, dark-haired little Princess Elizabeth, daughter of King George VI and Queen Elizabeth of England, graciously accepts ceremonious greetings of Lord Norfolk at Westminster Abbey just before the coronation. Behind the little Princess Charming is Lord Lascelles, son of the Earl and Countess of Harewood. This picture came by RCA Radio from London to New York, thence to the Boston Evening American by International Soundphoto Service.



PEERS PAY HOMAGE—Newly crowned and seated on the throne of his ancestors, King Emperor George VI of England and her dominions beyond the seas receives the homage of his subjects, as represented by peers and nobles from near and far. One of these is kneeling and pledging fealty. The scene is one which has been re-enacted, century after century, all down through English history. The present King is the 36th ruler consecrated in Westminster Abbey since William the Conqueror in 1066. He and his crown and throne symbolize the loose yet binding tie which links together the widely separated, self-governing units of the British empire. This picture was sent by radio from London to New York and was relayed here.



PAST AND PRESENT—For the second time in her life, Dowager Queen Mary stands on a balcony of Buckingham Palace, listening to the cheers of a Coronation Day throng. She stood here for the first time, 26 years ago, when the King beside her was George V, her husband. Now the King is her second son, George VI, newly crowned in Westminster Abbey.



POMP OF YESTERYEAR—By no means "one with Ninevah and Tyre," as Kipling would have it, is all England's pomp of yesteryear, revived in greater splendor than ever for the coronation of King George VI. Here is their ceremonious costumes are riding the Dukes of Gloucester and Kent, brothers of the King; the Earl of Athlone, governor of Windsor Castle; Lord Louis Mountbatten, and the Earl of Harewood, brother-in-law of the King. You see them as they appeared in the coronation procession, watched by cheering thousands. This picture, like the others on the page, was sent by radio

Coronation Only New Game For Little Princess, 6

PRINCESS MARGARET ROSE

TELLS COUSINS OF PAGEANTRY

London, May 13 (INS)—Six-year-old Princess Margaret Rose, youngest attendant at the coronation of her parents, attracted so much amused attention at the Westminster Abbey ceremony that she virtually "stole the show."

Princess Elizabeth, her 11-year-old sister, was impressed with the dignity of the occasion and acted with all the reserve of a grown woman, but to Margaret Rose the whole thing seemed just like a new kind of party and she wanted to have fun.

In the abbey the little girls sat in the front row of the royal box beside their grandmother, and Margaret Rose peered over the edge in delighted excitement. She smiled at people she knew and once she started to wave, but Elizabeth nudged her and she subsided.

CORONET TOO BIG

When the King and Queen were crowned the Princesses took their own gold coronets from their laps and after careful examination to make sure they didn't get them on backwards, pulled them down over their curls.

CORONET TOO BIG

From then on Margaret Rose spent much of her time pushing the coronet first to the back of her head and then to the front. Elizabeth held a careful pose most of the time, but later she admitted she had had trouble with the coronet.

The ceremony was a long one for such a little girl as Margaret Rose and many times her attention wandered.

She looked in the gold coronation [illegible] apparently to find with disappointment that it had no pictures.

She sucked a thumb for a while until Elizabeth saw her and nudged again.

At last, weary beyond control, she yawned widely at the august and stately Bishop of Canterbury and dropped her head on the balustrade of the box to rest in comfort.

TELLS OF POMP

Finally, having been nudged into a state of dignity by Elizabeth, she sat up, tried to wiggle her ears, tickled her sister to see what would happen, and was again nudged.

Back in Buckingham Palace the princesses were joined in the nursery by the children of the Duke of Kent who were considered too young to attend the long ceremony. So the smaller children sat spellbound while Elizabeth and Margaret Rose told them in detail of all the pomp and pageantry of Britain's ancient ceremony of kingly consecration.

Sport roadsters of the classiest design are included among the many special bargains offered during the CALL OF THE OPEN ROAD Used Car Sale.

It's Our Family's Whiskey, Neighbor

A little old-fashioned pleasure for the old timers

Every once in a while, old Tim Stiles trots that old talking machine up to our house and gets us to playing those pet records of his over and over again. Tim, he'd sit all night listening, if he had his way!

Harry E. Wilken

Our Family's Recipe brings you sweet memories of good old days!

Of all the different folks making whiskey these days, I'd go so far as to say I don't suppose there's a one of them that believes in the modern way of doing things more than us Wilkens do. I mean to say the modern way of keeping everything just spick and span—keeping your mash tub clean as a whistle, polishing up your bottles till they just shine and all that. But in other things, like good old Family Recipes, we got a feeling the grand old-fashioned way of doing things can't be beat.

Our family—Grandpa Wilken, Pa Wilken and us—has been distilling now since the year 1886—and right now we're making whiskey just as mild and just as tasty as we did first off when our Family started in. And this is our own Family's Recipe I'd sure like you to try it!

J. P. MORGAN ILL, MISSES CORONATION

London, May 13 (AP)—J. P. Morgan, the New York financier, was disclosed today to have suffered a heart ailment that kept him from attending the coronation ceremonies yesterday in Westminster Abbey.

Thomas W. Lamont, one of his New York partners, said Morgan was better and that he planned to return to the United States within two weeks.

"Mr. Morgan was prevented from attending the coronation as planned as his physician thought it more prudent for him to keep to the house following a slight recurrence of a heart difficulty he had a year ago," Lamont said.

"His condition is highly satisfactory."

JUNIOR BIRDMEN OF AMERICA

A Nationwide Organization Devoted To American Youth in Aviation

By L. F. ROSS
Boston Wing Commander

The Junior Birdmen of America, with its half a million air-minded boys and girls as members, will prove one of the most potent forces in the observance of an annual Aviation Day, according to Lawrence Shaw of New York, national director.

JUNIOR BIRDMEN OF AMERICA
(Membership open to all boys and girls 10 to 21)

I wish to join the Junior Birdmen of America. I enclose a dime (well wrapped) for my gold wings and other membership materials.

Print name ....

Street address ....

City .... State ....

My Age Is Now ....(Give Your CORRECT Age)

Mail to Junior Birdmen, Boston American Wing, 100 Summer St., Boston, Mass.

The organization has solidly endorsed a Congressional resolution to proclaim a yearly Aviation Day for the United States and to make it of equal if not greater importance than Army Day and Navy Day.

National Director Shaw sent the following message to the secretaries of the Army and Navy Union which is sponsoring the legislation, [illegible] to Representative James A. Shanley, Connecticut, who presented the resolution to Congress:

"Half a million air-minded boys and girls of the United States, through their membership in the Junior Birdmen of America, wish to express their hearty endorsement of your plan for an annual national aviation day. You may be assured of our co-operation in making this annual day one in which aviation will be demonstrated as a power of national defense for the purpose of maintaining peace."

Junior Birdmen national headquarters, however, while enthusiastic over the resolution which is almost assured of passing with unanimous support, inferred that a better date might have been selected in that May 28th will conflict with Decoration Day, America's greatest day of mourning, which follows only two days later.

Asked for suggestions of a better date, National Director Shaw suggested either May 20th, in celebration of Lindbergh's famous flight, or a date late in July which would afford much better flying weather over the entire country for the occasion of maneuvers and special sky parades to celebrate the day. This would also give America a mid summer holiday.

The Junior Birdmen of America will plan nation-wide celebrations for its membership each year on that day should the resolution be adopted by Congress.

In memory of John H. Shobe, one of New England's most popular pilots, the Shobe Memorial squadron of Everett will have a basket of flowers sent on Decoration Day, May 30 to White Chapel Memorial Park in Detroit where the flier's ashes lie in an urn.

This was decided upon after Nathan Bronski, 2?0 Springvale avenue, Everett, sponsor of the flight unit, had received a letter from Mrs. Shobe who is living in Detroit. Bronski had written to her telling her of the squadron's plan and asking her advice on details.

Officers of the Shobe Memorial squadron are: Commander, David Adelstone, and captain, William Davis. Members are Jack Bronski, John F. Jacobs, Carl [illegible], [illegible], C. Ravaretta, Martin [illegible], Henry [illegible], Irving Meiker, Fred Hartung, Charles Geyer, Harry Lerman, Howard Leland, Calvin Kashahman, Irving Schwartz and Nathaniel Fleshman.

Sponsor Edward Sharkey recently led members of the Diving Hawks squadron of Somerville through a very interesting tour of the Charlestown Navy Yard. Daniel Coslin, captain of the group, reports that the highlight of the day was the inspection of the cruiser "Vincennes" which had four Curtiss SOC-2 planes aboard, two of which were mounted on catapults.

Harvey Card is the new captain of the Leaping Lenas squadron of Everett, commanded by George Abagis. Kenneth Abagis has been elected sergeant-at-arms. Rover, "the dog that lives at the meeting house," was elected as mascot of the club.

Talks by members of the Flying Hawks of Dorchester, commanded by Roy Oro, are slated for imminent meetings. Robert Lyons is to lead discussion on an aviation topic; Joseph Dever will speak on Colonel Lindbergh, Ethel McKay on Wiley Post, Florence Nimenski, Amelia Earhart; Hubert McLeon, Frank Hawks, Alice Fee, Richard Byrd, and Albert Cohen, Jimmy Doolittle.

Gordon Cain of Hyde Park (left) and William Webber, Milton, will be contestants in the wing model plane championship tournament on July 12 at Franklin Field for Junior Birdmen, to decide the winner of the free trip to Atlanta, Ga. They are studying the manuals which contain regulations which will govern the meet.

'Riviera' as Hampton Film

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service

Copyright, 1937, by Universal Service

Los Angeles, May 13—Ambitious Hope Hampton, who hasn't made a picture since the silent days, has joined Universal as their newest singing star.

Yes, indeed, that week of intensive testing when Hope posed day and night for voice tests, technicolor and black and white shots won her a long term contract, with "Riviera" as her very first Universal picture.

Louella O. Parsons

"Riviera" is the Jerome Kern-Dorothy Fields operetta which has been waiting for a star with a sufficiently important singing voice. Hope, who has sung with the Chicago Opera Company, and who has spent years perfecting her musical education, is just the girl the new U has been waiting for, according to Charlie Rogers. He says Hope is so glamorous that he expects her to surprise the world when she makes her talking picture debut. Hope and Jules Brulatour, her millionaire husband, leave Friday for New York, returning here in a few months for "Riviera."

When the Irish and the French get together, it's something. And that's just what you are going to see in "Danger—Love at Work." Darryl Zanuck has selected Irish Jack Haley as the screen vis-a-vis for his petite French importation, Simone Simon, with Otto Ludwig Preminger, distinguished Austrian director, megaphoning.

Zanuck, who has had very few failures in his life, is convinced that little Simone needs a change of character. He tried her as the waif in "Seventh Heaven." Now she's going to go humorous and maybe this is just what she needs.

School has been called for Grace Moore June 1 when she starts "The Sound of Your Voice." She will have as her co-starring partner Melvyn Douglas, than whom there is no better liked comedian on the screen. Melvyn by the way has had a lot of good natured kidding after legally changing his name from Hesselberg to Douglas, and we can't say we blame him. No director has yet been set for La Moore, but Harry Cohn expects to name one tomorrow. We had thought it might be Robert Riskin but it seems unlikely that he will be back from Europe in time.

JOE CUNNINGHAM appearing with his social security number tattooed on his arm. Not a bad idea. That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Airminded in Honolulu

There is plenty of excitement and thrills in "Wings Over Honolulu" which opened at the RKO Keith, Boston, today. The above scene from the film shows Polly Rawles and William Gargan in one of the exciting scenes from the film.

(Letter from the Holland stooges to the Principal Character, who's been bedded at St. Elizabeth's Hosp. longer than it's fair for a guy not to have a leg under him.)

From a Rumble Seat:

DEAR GEO.:

Got your letter (from Gen. Cole) . . . The one on the press cars being barred from National League Field's Gaffney St. . . . He sezs he was in Natick that Sun., on inspection work . . . But he doesn't say he was there all day . . . His explanation on the incident is that he never asked to have the cars barred . . . It was one of our own sportswriters who said he heard the Gen's words . . . Cole sez the Commonwealth Armory is a million-dollar property, and the only way to get the animals out (hope he means just the hosses) is through the Gaffney St. entrances . . . But isn't National League Field a million-dollar property? . . . And wasn't it made by the newspaper lads the bars went up against? . . . Anyway, what's the Gen. kicking about? . . . He'll have full sway pretty soon . . . You'll notice he didn't deny that . . . Well, anyway, the Gen. has made special arrangements for sportswriters' cars on Armory grounds . . . Shall we kiss and make up?

GEORGE HOLLAND

Scribble on the Wall:

Before you've been handed a walking stick, Geo., one of Gov. Hurley's stated department heads and a second lad, a commission member, will go down the drain, and in due time, as a result, a paper a lot of the boys carry to show the law will have a different signature stamped . . . Your Stooge No. 2 doesn't mean a pistol permit, either . . .

Once Over Lightly:

The Traveler's Helen Eager is on preview at Osteopathic Hosp. for an appendectomy . . . And the A. M. Record's Joyce Dana is under glass at Baker Memorial while specialists peer and decide . . . It must be Peggy's Chi. training that holds her upright in the ill-winds . . .

Dance Steps Feature of Film

"Shall We Dance" seventh in the Fred Astaire-Ginger Rogers series of film musicals and one of the best made in the lot, is being held over for a second week at the Keith-Memorial, where it is doing good business at the box office.

Story of a ballet dancer who'd rather be a hoofer, "Shall We Dance" involves Astaire, the b. d., romantically with Miss Rogers, musical comedy star. Rumors of their marriage finally force the two to a secret wedding, with the understanding that the bride is to sue immediately for a divorce.

Naturally, the divorce never takes place. However the leading to it furnishes the opportunity for the screen's topflight dancing twosome to do "They All Laughed," "Let's Call the Whole Thing Off," "They Can't Take That Away," and for Fred to "Slap That Bass" in the lily-white engine room in rhythm with the machinery.

The Gershwin brothers are responsible for the six songs, all of them hummable and nicely spotted in this RKO Radio release which Pandro S. Berman has produced.

Edward Everett Horton and Eric Blore provide plenty of comedy. Ketti Gallian, turned brunette, is the romantic heavy who briefly menaces the Astaire-Rogers romance.

One of the most beautiful sequences finds Astaire partner with the ballet-dancing Harriet Hoctor.

"A Day With the Quintuplets" which introduces the five famous little girls in their first talking picture, is the companion picture of 20-minute duration.

Astaire-Rogers Triumph Held Over

Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers, shown above in one of the scenes from "Shall We Dance," do some new, fancy steps in their latest film hit which has been held over for a second week at RKO Keith Memorial.

Yiddish Hit Coming

M[illegible] S[illegible], leading Jewish stage comedian, will make his debut here this season in the title role of "The Galician Rabbi," Joseph Rumshinsky's Yiddish operetta, a week from Friday evening at the Boston Opera House. The performance of this New York Yiddish hit will be repeated Saturday afternoon and evening.

Mr. Rumshinsky, dean of Jewish composers, will be here to conduct his own score for the musical.

Skulnik will be supported by the original New York cast which includes Leon Gold, Fania Rubina, Tillie Rabinowich, Goldie Eisman, Anna Loeb and Sarah Skulnik.

In Title Role

Menasha Skulnik who will play the title role of "The Galician Rabbi" at the Boston Opera House on Friday night, May 21.

Viennese Costume Ball Preview Thrills Benefit Committee

By BETTY ALDEN

THE GIRLS who have been chuckling at the pictures of British maidens training for the Coronation and court presentations by learning to walk and curtsey with books balanced on their heads, are [illegible] that there was much more behind these preparations than a mere British desire for thoroughness . . .

They are beginning to wonder if they had better do some [illegible] before the Viennese Costume Ball a week from tomorrow evening . . .

MRS. ROBERT HILLYER

Changes in styles of clothing are not the only differences between the customs of two generations . . . as was clearly demonstrated at the preview of the Viennese Ball costumes at a tea dance in the Balinese Room yesterday afternoon . . .

Most of the debs and post debs who modelled the old fashioned gowns are veterans of many fashion shows . . . but they quickly discovered that the easy, swinging stride, now considered the last word in urbane sophistication, is certainly not at home in a bustle or hoop skirt . . .

Virginia Wright had difficulty navigating her hoop skirt up the steps to the small stage which served as a runway . . . she accomplished the ascent and descent by lifting the skirt on both sides, disclosing her slippers [illegible] . . . which would have been [illegible] shocking audacity in the days [illegible] etiquette . . .

[illegible] Nancy Cochrane is a very good little actress, and [illegible] make-up she also had a bit of difficulty [illegible] fashioned dignity which was [illegible] shoulder and bouffant costume, as [illegible] stalwart arm of Arnett McKennan . . .

Arnett [illegible] color military jacket with [illegible] crimson trousers . . . As [illegible] was only a dress rehearsal of the real ball, Arnett good naturedly accepted plenty of teasing about his [illegible] which were pretty incongruous with the strait [illegible] military costume . . .

IN SPITE OF THE informality and dress rehearsal atmosphere those who attended the tea were very much impressed with the costumes . . . and couldn't help but conjure up a mental picture of what a colorful spectacle the ball will be if everyone complies with the committee's request to wear costumes which would have been appropriate at the Court of Louis Franz Josef of Austria . . .

Mrs. William Prace Pratt had the fun of unpacking the gowns from their wrappings . . . hooking the girls into them and helping to arrange the hair ornaments . . . Incidentally, if you are at a loss to know what to wear in your hair for the ball, the simplest and most effective gadget is a small fluff of tulle with a curled ostrich feather pinned somewhere on the crown of the head . . .

Mrs. [illegible] chairman of the ball, which will benefit the Museum of Modern Art, was as busy as a bee greeting everyone [illegible] while Mr. Hillyer, Eileen Nolan and Nat [illegible] who hadn't definitely decided what to wear on the 21st, were seriously contemplating the possibilities of each costume . . .

Mrs. [illegible] Williams, Jr., Lucretia Brooks, Katharine Newbold, Mr. and Mrs. Robert C. [illegible]erry, Mrs. John Filoon, Natalie Winslow, Lewis Perry, Nat Clark and Eleanor Miller were just a few of the interested spectators . . .

The ancient and the modern met when Dottie Preston, in the most up to date of street dresses, danced a modern fox trot with one of the costumed gentlemen . . . and for a bit of diversion [illegible] and Harold Baptiste did a number of exhibition dances from Viennese waltz to a fast, swinging fox trot . . .

* * *

Lecture at Forbes Home

MRS. WILLIAM H. FORBES of Adams street, Milton, is opening her home on the afternoon of May 27 for a lecture with moving pictures, on "Bird Life and Conservation" . . . the speaker will be Laurence Fletcher, well known authority on birds and flowers and a member of the public reservations committee . . . Mrs. Alexander Forbes is assisting the prospective hostess with plans for the afternoon . . .

* * *

The old saying "Happy the bride the sun shines on," will be very appropriately applied to the wedding next Monday afternoon of Elizabeth Kitchel of Englewood, N. J., to Alexander Lincoln, Jr., of Brookline . . . The bride-to-be has planned a garden wedding and has consulted the weather man and the Farmers Almanac to be sure she will have a fair day, almost as frequently as the Moonlight Carnival committee has checked up the forecast for May 26 . . . The coming week-end will find Mr. Lincoln and his bride to be wined and dined on all sides . . . with a supper dance at the St. Regis Roof, a luncheon and a buffet supper on Sunday and a luncheon given by the Misses [illegible] aunts of the bride on Monday . . . William Lincoln will be his brother's best man and the ushers will be Thomas Whiteside of Medfield and David Crockett of Boston . . . The bridegroom graduated from Harvard in 1932 and belongs to Hasty Pudding Institute of 1770 and Iroquois Clubs . . .

ROYAL COURT COSTUMES OF LONG AGO TO FEATURE VIENNESE BALL BENEFIT

THE DAGUERREOTYPE was as much a novelty as television is today, when these costumes were in vogue, so when they were dressed up for the pre-view of the Viennese Ball yesterday afternoon, Jane Ragle and Carrick Heiskell decided to pose in the manner typical of old daguerreotypes. The costume Jane has chosen for the ball on May 21 is a pink fashioned with bustles, and frills of white tulle fastened with flowers to match her pink rosebud headdress.

Peggy Parker, daughter of Mrs. J. Harleston Parker, was also dressed up in a costume to show the guests at the pre-view the correct style for the Viennese Ball, which is to represent a reception at the Court of Franz Josef. Peggy's gown is an effective wide skirted model of mulberry satin trimmed with black tulle and lace, and the plume which curls over her hair is also black.

Cecilian Guild Entertains at Dance

Cecilian Guild abandoned things British and went cosmopolitan at its Balinese Room supper dance last evening. Cosmopolitan indeed . . . the music was Latin (rhumbas and tangoes predominated) . . . the decorations were Japanese and the fare plain American at the swanky spring soiree.

Nor did any of the smart young matrons tog themselves in coronation colors . . . the only indication of yesterday's history-making event was the door prize . . . a set of service plates encrusted with the royal seal, which Mrs. Robert Cair won . . . a new decoration for her Chestnut Hill home.

Deserve Orchids

And so to Mrs. Christopher Duncan of Newton should go an orchid for providing a gala evening for the philanthropic minded ladies. She chose a black crepe gown topped by a lame blouse and a cluster of orchids. And Mrs. William Arthur Reilly should come in for a round of thanks. She's the newly-elected president, and took a turn collecting receipts at the door . . . her bouffant black taffeta sporting snowy white organdie flowers.

Another of the Guild's new officers, Mrs. George Coyne, entertained a jolly group at her table . . . Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hegarty . . . Mr. and Mrs. Robert Stanton, the latter wearing sheer black and gardenias and Dr. and Mrs. William [illegible] . . . Mrs. [illegible] [illegible] blue [illegible] of dubonet flowers [illegible]

Viennese waltzes were second to rhumbas in popularity. Helen Muirhead and her fiance, Tom Foley, seemed to enjoy them [illegible] At their table were Alice Gallagher . . . bright flowers strewn over her white crepe . . . and Owen Dooley.

Holding forth at a large balcony table were Mr. and Mrs. G. Kirk in a bright print . . . Mrs. John G. Downing, supper chairman . . . Mrs. M. L. Ryan . . . trailing wisps of fuchsia and flesh chiffon trimming her pale blue crepe and Mrs. Edward McLaughlin whose spring frock was [illegible] A [illegible] soft pink satin.

Entertain

Nearby were Mary and Helen Fitzgerald while in the opposite balcony table Mrs. Frank S. Lane entertained a table of friends . . . Mrs. Lawrence Murray . . . brilliant [illegible]

A few were [illegible] . . . Mrs. Charles Kickham a very regal one of pearl and Mrs. Joseph Rugo's was fashioned of rhinestones. She was the center of a gay group . . . [illegible] Mrs. John J. GLORIES OF PAST, PROMISE OF FUTURE IN CEREMONIES

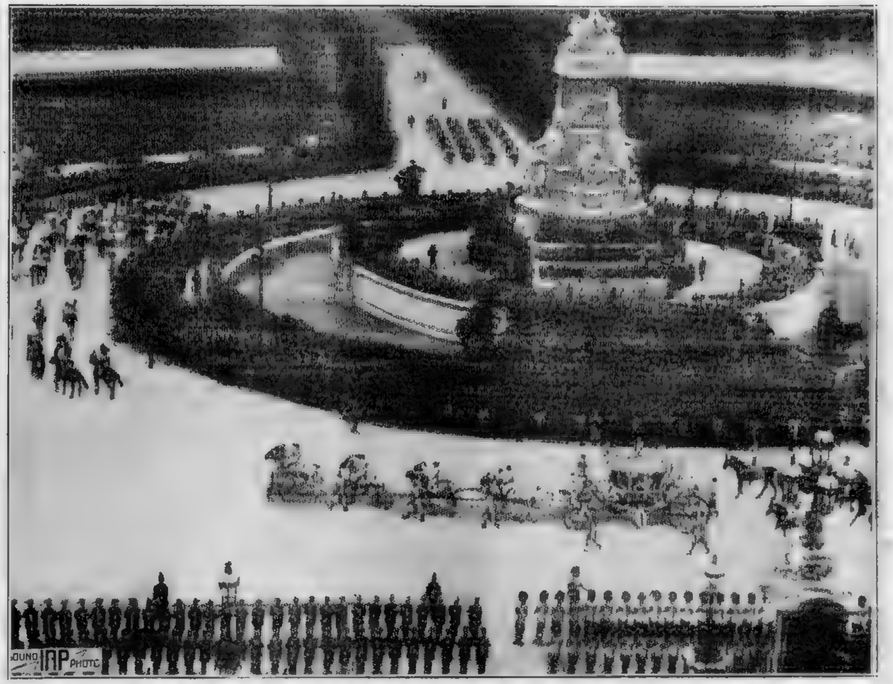
AMERICAN PEERESS—In scarlet and ermine coronation robes are Lord and Lady Astor, as they arrived at Westminster Abbey to be present at the ceremonious enthroning of King George VI. Lady Astor, the former Nancy Langhorne of Virginia, is England's only American-born member of Parliament. She and her husband joined the great gathering of nobles which roared acceptance of the new monarch in accordance with ancient tradition.



PRECISION, FORMALITY—This general view of the coronation procession passing through Victoria square, London, gives a good impression of the precision and formality with which the world's greatest spectacle—that of the crowning of a modern British monarch—was staged. In the foreground is the royal coach, drawn by its eight white horses. For all of the 6,000,000 persons estimated as in the watching throng, there is not the hint of crowding or disorder here, but an effect of spaciousness, good timing and well-rehearsed smoothness.

JUST BEFORE RECEIVING CROWN—Not yet crowned but wearing a "cap of state," symbolic of his status as unconsecrated occupant of the throne, King George VI of England sits in Westminster Abbey as the Archbishop of Canterbury reads a part of the coronation service just preliminary to the anointing of the king with holy oil. This scene is in the royal box, on the south side of the Westminster altar. Queen Elizabeth, head bare, sits at right. This picture, like others on the page, was sent from London to New York by RCA Radio, then was relayed to the Boston Evening American by International News Soundphoto Service.

REPRESENTING UNCLE SAM—Uncle Sam's navy, diplomatic service and army were represented at the English coronation by these three notables. They are Admiral Hugh Rodman, Ambassador James W. Gerard and General John J. Pershing. The American ambassador, braving home smiles and newspaper ironies, is in traditional British court dress, of short silk breeches and silk stockings. Admiral Rodman and General Pershing wear formal uniforms as prescribed by regulations of their respective services. This picture and others on this page came by RCA Radio from London to New York, thence to the Boston Evening American by International News Soundphoto Service.

THIS IS LIFE

BY

Robert E. Rogers

The alarm clock went off at about six. It hadn't seemed quite worth while to get up at five o'clock to hear the whole show. Six was quite early enough. From six to eleven, then, except for a brief breakfast, I listened. At eleven, sitting in the car outside Technology, I heard the [illegible] I heard as much of the Coronation as anybody.

ROBERT E. ROGERS

First, the beautiful job the British Broadcasting Company did in collaboration with [illegible] The service came over as clear as a bell with really beautiful [illegible] tones. My radio is ten years old, but [illegible] The old-fashioned transcontinental buzzing and [illegible] and blasting was entirely absent. The ceremonies might have been taking place on Beacon Hill.

Observer Took Time To Hunt for Right Word

What struck me as most interesting was that though the announcers and observers had traces of what we call a "British" accent, the Archbishop of Canterbury and George VI were quite free from it. They spoke English, not British. The Archbishop, in particular, might have been our own Bishop Lawrence. I cannot praise him more highly than to remark that he spoke good Bostonian English of the best quality.

The observers were uneven. One with a rather thin voice was inclined a little to stammer and hesitate. If he couldn't get the word he wanted he took time to hunt for it and find it. The man who described the procession at the Marble Arch rattled away like an American, like [illegible] MacNamee or Floyd Gibbons at top form. But the man who handled the service in the Abbey did it beautifully. No improvising, no exclamations. He was obviously reading from a carefully prepared text, very economically written, informative but during the most important parts of the ceremony not over-descriptive. The feeling proper to a religious service was admirably kept up.

Coronation Imbedded In the Communion Service

For it was essentially a religious service and only incidentally a sensationally gorgeous pageant. The Communion service was not part of the Coronation. The Coronation was imbedded in the Communion service. The Coronation, so to speak, was an important interlude in the choral service which included the General Confession and the General Absolution and climaxed in the dead quiet in which King and Queen received the bread and wine, followed by the Archbishop's prayers and the triumphant Te Deum, in which the high sweet voices of boy sopranos soared like larks into the empyrean.

The transition from the hushed and reverent atmosphere of the Abbey to the shouting crowds outside the Abbey annex was finely handled. The continuous and sustained shouting of the crowd surpassed, I am inclined to say, that which we heard the day Lindbergh landed in New York. And it ended magnificently with the clamourous pealing of great bells.

Broadcasting Handled With Dignity, Reverence

The British Broadcasting Company must have had microphones open all the way from the Abbey, along the Embankment, all the long journey to the observer who stood at the Marble Arch within sight of the end of the route near Buckingham Palace. It seemed to me that it did a magnificent job in covering the out-door sights, particularly the great vari-colored spectacle of the long military procession from all the four corners of the Empire. The crowds cheered Queen Mary and the little princesses as heartily as they cheered the sovereigns themselves. The cheering for Stanley Baldwin, it seemed to me, was rather perfunctory. Edward, of course, wasn't mentioned once.

It was worth hearing, even if it reduced breakfast to a rapid formality and absolutely ruined the morning so far as doing any work was concerned. The thing was enormously real and affecting and during the services quite free from broadcasters' chatter. It was handled with dignity, reverence, and suberb technical competence. It was an historical experience more memorable even than King George's funeral, which we shared with the entire British Empire.

As Ryan Gave Mutual Details to State Probers

George S. Ryan, one-time general counsel for the now defunct Commonwealth Mutual Liability Insurance Company, accused by the company's former president, Count Luigi Castelli, of being the "Mussolini" of the concern, is shown as he testified before a special legislative investigating committee at the State House.

Digging into his brief case, Ryan presented papers to show how the insurance company was organized, with a board of eight directors. It was at the suggestion of State Insurance Division that he became a director in the company, Ryan said yesterday. Today, however, he said it was Frank Cohen of New York who suggested it. He severed connection with the company in January, 1936, said the counsel.

Boston Evening American Photos

Submitting subscriptions totaling about $120,000 to comply with the state requirement of $100,000 before a license could be granted, Ryan testified that Insurance Commissioner DeCelles rejected many of the subscriptions, cutting the total down to about $80,000. Here the former counsel is shown lighting a cigaret as he presented his testimony.

RYAN DENIES NAME OF COHEN WITHHELD

Attorney George S. Ryan of Belmont declared at the State House today that he had never intentionally withheld from Insurance Commissioner DeCelles information that Frank Cohen of New York was financial backer of the now bankrupt Commonwealth Mutual Liability Insurance Company.

"Did the commissioner ask you why you had not told him about Cohen?" Ryan was then asked.

"I don't recall anything along that line," was the reply.

Ryan said that most of his conversations with DeCelles related to claims filed against the Commonwealth. He denied vigorously that he had ever agreed to keep the commissioner "in touch" with company activities.

Ryan also issued a statement, pointing out that testimony relating to his selection as eighth member of the board of directors of the Commonwealth had been misinterpreted.

"When I said that the state insurance division wanted eight directors instead of seven and that 'it was suggested' that I become the eighth, I did not mean that the state suggested it,' he declared.

SUGGESTED BY COHEN

"As a matter of fact, it was Mr. Cohen who made the suggestion and I accepted."

Ryan was on the stand for the second successive day in the hearing being conducted by a special legislative commission in affairs of the Commonwealth.

He was asked if he knew that Judge Levy of the New York Supreme Court had seen Commissioner DeCelles. Judge Levy's name was mentioned by the witness yesterday as the "very distinguished gentleman" who put to rest "suspicions" Ryan had of Cohen.

Ryan replied that he had no knowledge of the justice seeing DeCelles.

Then he was asked if he wanted to leave in testimony that DeCelles didn't know until September, some time after organization of the Commonwealth, that Cohen was interested in the company financially.

"I don't know just when Commissioner DeCelles knew about it," Ryan replied.

Q—Would you be surprised to know that there has been testimony that DeCelles knew about Cohen in February? A—There's been testimony here about a lot of things I never heard of before.

Then came a question whether Ryan knew if DeCelles was relying on him to keep him—the commissioner—informed on what was going on in the company. Ryan said he did not know of any such thing.

QUIZZED ON BONDS

Q—But he discussed the purchase (of $200,000 worth) of bonds (for the Commonwealth) with you? Not to my knowledge.

Q—He has testified to that effect. A—He suggested it would be a good idea.

Q—Did he suggest the bonds to be purchased? A—I'm not sure about that.

Q—Who decided the type of bonds to be purchased and the character of the bonds? A—The character of the bonds was decided by Ray E. Latshaw, general manager, Mr. Cohen and myself.

Q—How long have you known Commissioner DeCelles? A—Three or four years.

Q—Were you neighbors at your summer homes? A—At Allerton, near Nantasket, we were.

DENIES AGREEMENT

Q—Didn't you have an understanding with the commissioner that you would keep him informed of what was going on? A—I would not make such an agreement with anyone supervising a company in which I was interested.

Q—Did you withhold information that Cohen was connected with the Commonwealth? A—There was never any intentional withholding of information.

NAME 13 POLICE IN GUN MATCH

Thirteen Boston policemen were designated by Commissioner Timilty today to represent the department at the pistol tournament of the New England Police Revolver League at Camp Curtis Guild, Wakefield, Saturday and Sunday.

Headed by Captain Thomas S. J. Kavanagh and Sergeant Andrew Markhard the delegation includes Patrolman William T. Desmond recognized as the best pistol shot in the department. Six new patrolmen, who never fired a gun before their 30-day training period recently, are also in the detail.

New patrolmen who will make the trip, and their divisions, are: F. Nigloschy and W. R. Stahler, both of 19; J. J. Ryan, 13; T. L. Sullivan, 7; T. J. Linehan and P. A. Hagerty, 6.

Others are J. H. Tierney and E. L. Laird, both of traffic; E. H. Vail, 14, and E. Culkin, 9.

Use Gas Masks At South End Fire

One man was driven to the street and a cat was suffocated today when fire swept a two-story brick building at 67 Carver street, South End. Firemen donned gas masks to battle the blaze.

The fire, which was of undetermined origin, is believed to have started in the Ararat Cafe, on the lower floor, and swept upstairs to an oriental rug showroom. Damage was estimated at $1500.

2 Held in Attack On Harvard Boys In Garage

In the court over which the father of Edward A. Counihan III presides two Boston men accused of assault and battery on the youth, Harvard Law student, were arraigned before Judge Robert Walcott today in East Cambridge.

Trial of Louis DiBiasi, 25, of Chambers street, Boston, and Anthony Leotti, 30, of Vine avenue, Roxbury, was continued until May 21, after they pleaded not guilty. Bond was set at $500 each.

Di Biasi is also charged with assault on Henry M. Fuller, another Harvard student.

Police said two men confronted the students as they were about to step into a car, where a young woman was sitting, in a Harvard square garage early today.

Pushing Counihan against the machine, they began punching the two as other students rushed to the students' aid.

As the two men sped away in another car students noted its license number.

The two defendants were arrested later, after their car was found parked in Massachusetts avenue, near Technology. Two girls were in the car and told police the men were in a nearby restaurant.

Woman Fugitive Is Resentenced

Guarded by a woman attendant and a police escort, Mrs. Laura Hall, attractive 26-year-old convicted bandit lookout, was resentenced in Fitchburg District Court today to Sherborn Reformatory for Women.

She was arrested last night by Special Officers Joseph Dever and Francis Coleman of Boston police as she sipped a glass of beer in a Roxbury cafe. She escaped from the reformatory on April 6.

With her in the cafe was a young man who identified himself as a bus line employe.

According to police, Mrs. Hall had been living in West Springfield street under the name of Sarah Adams. She admitted that since her escape she had lived for a time in New York City with Mrs. Lillian Stanley Gamble of Springfield, convicted bigamist, who escaped with Mrs. Hall.

Judge E. W. Blodgett sent her back to the reformatory to finish her term.

USES BREECHES BUOY TO RECOVER BODY

Lowell, May 13. Over the rushing turbulent waters of the Merrimack river in a breeches buoy a [illegible] guardsman today [illegible] the body of George F. Spead, 39, of Mammoth road, Lowell in spectacular and dramatic fashion.

The body was recovered from its position, wedged between two rocks, after coast guardsmen of the Newburyport station were successful in shooting a line [illegible] 500 feet from the eastern side of the river.

Efforts to reach the body last night, under the glare of floodlights, were unsuccessful when two lines shot across the river broke and then the coast guardsmen ran out of projectiles.

Resuming work this morning the rescuers succeeded in their first try.

Spead, a newspaper stereotyper, was drowned yesterday afternoon attempting to swim through the rapids as a result of a wager made with a friend, police said.

THOUSANDS WATCH

Surfman Robert H. Westcott of the coast guard station made the recovery 250 yards from shore while thousands watched from the river banks [illegible] swing over the water [illegible]

When he reached a position over the body, Westcott barefooted dropped to one of the rocks. Then he secured a line around the body and was hauled to shore while he dragged the body through the [illegible] water. [illegible]

[illegible] boat. They then called the coast guard.

WAS EXPERT SWIMMER

According to police, Spead and a companion, Roy Corcoran, also of Mammoth road, had wagered that the [illegible] could swim from the Riverside [illegible] Merrimack to a rock in mid stream. Spead was known as an expert swimmer.

He had only taken a few steps in the water, however, when he was grabbed by the current and swept helplessly down stream until his body became lodged between the rocks.

Beacon Hill Man Held on Hit-Run Charge, 2 Hurt

Clad in full evening dress, Jackson M. Norris, 25-year-old Beacon Hill realtor, was arrested as a hit and run driver in Cambridge today following two collisions and a long chase.

His machine, according to police, struck a car operated by Louis H. Cardoos of Harvey street, North Cambridge, and caused injuries to Mrs. Margaret Dyer of Broadway, Cambridge, a passenger.

Cardoos' wife, Nellie, was also shaken up in the crash, police said, and the Norris machine sped away. A witness to the accident gave chase.

During the pursuit another car, operated by Benjamin Blonden of Elbery street, Cambridge, was struck on Broadway. The Norris car was halted at Kendall square.

Norris was arrested there and taken to Cambridge police headquarters. At East Cambridge district court a few hours later, still clad in his formal attire, he was arraigned on eight charges. He pleaded not guilty to all and was held in $1000 until May 19.

Police accused the defendant of operating so as to endanger, operating under the influence of liquor, drunkenness, leaving the scene after injuring Mrs. Dyer and leaving after damaging the automobiles.

Also, operating after suspension of his driving license, operating with no registration in his possession and operating with no license in his possession.

TOOMEY AIDS IN CRASH RESCUES

City Councillor John Toomey of Cambridge aided in the rescue of four persons from an overturned automobile today, although he was one of those shaken up in the crash.

The accident took place at Cambridge street and Webster avenue. Councillor Toomey was riding in the front seat of a car operated by John Crowley of Guyette road, Cambridge.

The car which overturned was driven by George Freese, 42, of Suffolk street, Chelsea, police said. With him was his wife, Mrs. Ellen Freese, 23; their son George, Jr., 14 months old and Freese's mother, Mrs. Annie E. Hayes, 73, all of the same address.

Toomey leaped from his car, ran to the other car and cleared the broken glass from the windows.

He [illegible] Mrs. Hayes and Mrs. Freese free of the wreckage. Thomas [illegible] of the [illegible] the rescue.

Man Drops Dead In Cambridge Store

An unidentified man, about 65 years old, suffered a fatal heart attack in a Central square, Cambridge, market at noon today. Taken to Cambridge City Hospital in a police ambulance, he was pronounced dead. The body was taken to Watson's mortuary.

Police described the victim as having grey hair, black shoes, wearing a brown suit and brown topcoat.

SYNOPSIS

Marie Alexander, young and unsophisticated, satiates her longing for romance by corresponding via a letter exchange club with a young man she had never seen.

When Edward Wilson, the correspondent, visits her, Marie is [illegible] that he will not care for her.

[illegible] she had written that her mother was an actress, and so she had been years ago, but now she conducts a beauty parlor in [illegible] on the outskirts of Hollywood.

Marie runs a circulating library there. The young couple meet and are mutually attracted and, after only two days courtship, profess their love.

Edward is to leave on business in two days and suggests that they marry secretly before he goes. And so, they do.

After wiring Julie that their car broke down and that Marie will spend the night with friends, the newlyweds stay at an unromantic auto camp.

CHAPTER SEVEN

When it was over and the minister put aside his formal manner, in the way that one takes off a too-tight shoe, and smiled, and said he hoped the they'd be very, very happy, she knew it was all over and she had hardly heard a word.

Happiness makes you selfish, she thought, as she stood beside Edward in the telegraph office later, as he wrote a telegram to Julie, explaining that they'd had engine trouble and couldn't get back, but Julie wasn't to worry, Marie would spend the night with Marjorie Samson, at Riverside, and would be home some time tomorrow.

Somewhere in the back of her head, she knew that it was all wrong, that Julie would wonder and worry, and that she might even try to telephone the Samsons, who weren't at Riverside at all. But she was too happy really to worry. She just stood beside Eward, touched the gray flannel of his coat sleeve and said:

"If you think it's all right, I do too."

It was getting late and they'd driven all day. "I did think we could stay at a really nice place," Edward said slowing up at Hickman's Autel to look it over, "but I don't want to kill you off driving all day and all night, too."

Marie had thought of Riverside. The Inn was so romantic.

"We might go on a little farther," she said.

Edward took another look at Hickman's one room stucco bungalows, each with "garage" attached.

"This isn't so hot, but we've passed worse."

"Will we come to something better?"

"We might," he said.

That was just it, they might. And after buying the white-gold ring, and giving five dollars to the minister and buying gas and [illegible] and spending $2.50 for lunch, he knew, without counting the change in his pockets, that the next place might be too good.

"I hate to take you farther, when I really don't know what's ahead. You look a little tired. Sometimes these auto camps aren't half bad . . . Do you mind?"

"I don't mind anything—if you're with me."

He knew she meant it. He [illegible] that never before in the history of the world had so much beauty and sweetness been rolled into the person of one small girl. He took her in his arms, and kissed her [illegible] gently, adoringly.

And so Mr. Harrison Hickman [illegible] from the pink [illegible] 'Store and Office' to see if the new prospects were going to stay or drive on, knew that they were newlyweds.

"A weddin' couple comin' back from Las Vegas," he called to his portly wife. "Looks like they stay—if they ever break that clinch."

"But I've got to tell mother," the new Mrs. Wilson said firmly. "I've got to."

"I know how you feel, honey, but listen! This is a secret wedding."

"Of course, it's a secret. We won't tell anyone else. Just mother and Charles. I've got to tell them."

They Would Tell

Silence from the bridegroom.

"Darling, she's so good, and she loves me so, and when we think of that wire we sent last night I could weep. I couldn't go on living that lie. I feel bad enough about it as it is, but if I could tell her the truth now, it would help. She'll understand. She'll be nice about it, you don't have to be afraid that she won't."

"We said we'd keep it secret," he repeated [illegible]

"Of course, dear! But just mother and Charlie?"

"What about my mother and dad. Don't they count?"

He smiled a little, she looked at him so blankly. His mother and dad. Somehow she'd never thought of them.

Edward had parents, of course. Everybody has parents. But it was hard to think of Edward's parents.

He was independent as a shooting star.

She wet her lips. "Why, of course. We'll tell them, too."

Mollified but still reluctant, he agreed. "All right, we'll tell your folks because you want to—but I'm afraid it will lead to all kinds of trouble.

"And we won't tell mine, because they're up North, and they're not going to suspect anything."

So she was happy again, and everything was perfect.

She [illegible] flung herself from the car when Edward brought it to a stop at 657 Dover street.

In the excitement of getting back, and being married, and getting ready to tell Julie all about it, she'd almost forgotten that Edward would leave that very night.

And then, as he started up the steps with her, she began to think . . . Julie's temper . . . things might be said . . .

"Edward, you won't mind—but I think it will be better for me to go in alone."

"No, it's my place to tell her."

"Please, darling. I want to talk to her first."

He really wanted to do the manly thing, but he couldn't help being relieved.

"Well—if you think so. I really ought to get the car back to the boys. This afternoon's their last chance to do anything with it.

"We're leaving right after ten tonight. Press has to be at work at eight-thirty tomorrow morning."

"Edward—I CAN'T let you go!"

Now she was going to cry again, which would be a poor [illegible] to break the news.

"Now, honey! Don't! Take it smiling! And you've got to look happy when you tell your mother. And I'll see you again before I leave. We'll have a little time together—"

"Edward! Edward, wait! Come to dinner. Mother wanted you to come that first night, but I wanted to be alone with you. Come tonight. Please!"

"I'll come. Six-thirty all right?"

Marie watched until the car turned the corner.

Soon she'd have to watch him drive away, and know that he wouldn't be coming back for dinner.

Wouldn't be coming back for months, perhaps for a year.

"We're Married"

She wiped her eyes, and went in.

She turned to see her mother in the doorway. Julie's large, soft face was flushed. She wore a little white rubber apron over her orchid uniform.

"I see you're back," she said in a voice that didn't sound like her own.

And Marie gave a little sob, and flung herself into the familiar comfort of the plump, orchid arms.

"Oh, mother! mother! We're married. Edward and I. I married him yesterday, in Las Vegas!"

* * *

Edward saw at a glance that Marie had been crying.

She'd changed into a yellow silk sport dress, and her hair was freshly curled, and she had put on a lot of powder and lipstick, but it didn't fool him.

Her mother looked as if she'd been crying, too, and Mr. Bronson, whom they both called Charlie, was plainly ill at ease.

"Sit down, sit down," he told Edward, piloting him to the book nook where Marie had her library.

Edward sat down. Presently he offered Charlie a cigarette, because he felt he had to have one himself.

"No, thanks," Charlie said. "I have my pipe."

He drew it from his baggy coat pocket, blew in it, stuffed it from a flat blue can he took from another pocket.

"I hear you folks got married yesterday."

"Yes," Edward said, "we got married."

"Well, that's the way of the world. Marriage and giving in marriage," Charlie said.

He took a long draw on his pipe.

"Folks live in Frisco?"

"Oakland."

"Oh, Oakland." Charlie took another draw.

"Not so much fog there as Frisco, I guess. Climate's a shade better. Though, after our climate she'll naturally feel it some. Lot of colds up there, I hear?"

"I beg your pardon?"

"What's that?"

"I'm sorry. I didn't hear just what you said."

Charlie looked at the young man his stepdaughter had just married. He felt sorry for him. He decided not to mention the climate.

After all, some people might really like it in San Francisco and Oakland—people who had never had the opportunity of living in southern California, of course.

"Well," he said at length, "young folks will marry. That's what I told the wife."

"Was she very angry?"

"Who? Julie? Oh, well, now I wouldn't exactly say as she—Well! you know how women folks are."

Bananas' History Is Rich in Romance

One-Time Luxury Are Natural Alkaline Food

By MARTHA LEE

HAVE you thought of the romance connected with many of our foods? Yes, and many of our leading food businesses have romantic beginnings that are immensely interesting.

We've been delving into the banana industry and have found that the "B" in Boston should stand for Banana as well as Beans. After that statement we owe an explanation.

Bananas were looked upon in the United States as a curiosity and rare tropical luxury 65 years ago when the first shipment was received in Boston.

In 1870, Captain Lorenzo D. Baker of Cape Cod, returning from South America in his schooner Telegraph, stopped at Jamaica for a cargo of bamboo. He took aboard a few bunches of bananas which he brought to New York.

The following spring he set sail for Jamaica, loaded a full cargo of bananas and coconuts and after a stormy return voyage of 18 days, landed the fruit in good condition at Boston, the first cargo of bananas ever brought to this port.

The success of this voyage attracted the attention of some Boston merchants, who joined Captain Baker in making further banana importations. Despite many discouragements they persisted in the endeavor. In partnership with eight other men, an association was formed in 1885 called The Boston Fruit Co.

The present generation accepts the banana as a staple of diet. They are easily digested, supply quick energy, contain valuable minerals, and satisfy a normal craving for sweets. They are put up and sealed by nature in a germ-proof package. Bananas are an alkaline food and are therefore an aid in correcting acidosis.

We submit for your approval some recipes for this one-time luxury.

BANANA FLUFF

1 pkg. strawberry flavored gelatin
1 cup boiling water
1 cup cold water
⅛ teaspoon salt
3 bananas, crushed
1 cup pineapple, crushed
9 marshmallows, finely cut

Dissolve gelatin in boiling water; add cold water and [illegible]. Chill until cold and syrupy. Place in bowl of cracked ice or ice water and whip with rotary egg beater until fluffy and thick like whipped cream. Fold in remaining ingredients. Turn into mold. Chill until firm. Serves 1[illegible].

EDEN PUDDING

1 cup heavy cream
½ pound marshmallows, finely cut
1 package pasteurized dates, finely cut
3 bananas diced
¼ pound walnuts, finely chopped
8 graham crackers, finely rolled

Whip cream. Fold [illegible] other ingredient except cracker crumbs. Shape mixture into a roll 3 [illegible] thick. Roll in crumbs which have been spread [illegible]. Chill in refrigerator 3 [illegible] 4 hours. Slice about 1 inch thick. Top with whipped cream and maraschino cherry, if desired. Serves 6.

BANANAS WITH CHOPS

Peel bananas, dip in beaten egg and crumbs, and fry in deep, hot fat. Alternate on the plate with broiled or fried [illegible] and garnish. Serve as a [illegible] main dish for dinner. The [illegible] are also delicious with [illegible]

BANANAS AND BACON EN BROCHETTE

2 to 4 bananas
4 slices bacon
Melted butter

Peel bananas, cut in slices about 1 inch thick. Cut each slice of bacon into 4 pieces. Put alternating pieces of banana and bacon on metal meat skewers. Brush banana with a little melted butter. Place on greased broiler rack, cook under moderate heat, turning occasionally until bacon is done.

BANANA AND RHUBARB BETTY

¾ pound rhubarb
¾ cup brown sugar
1½ cups buttered bread crumbs
1 large banana
Nutmeg

Wash and dice rhubarb, mix with [illegible] and allow to stand for half an hour. Arrange alternate layers of crumbs, sliced banana and sugared rhubarb in buttered baking dish. Top with crumbs, sprinkle with nutmeg and bake in moderate oven (350 F.) for 30 to 40 minutes.

BAKED SPICED HAM AND BANANAS

1 slice ham, about 1 inch thick
Few whole cloves
Prepared mustard
Brown sugar
[illegible] cup water
Juice of 1 lemon
2 to 3 bananas

Stick fat of ham with a few whole cloves. Place ham in baking dish, spread with prepared mustard, cover with brown sugar. Add water and juice of [illegible] bake in slow oven [illegible] F. for [illegible] minutes. Peel bananas, cut in halves lengthwise, arrange on top of ham. Sprinkle with lemon juice and brown sugar. [illegible] 15 to 1[illegible] minutes, basting bananas 2 or 3 times with meat drippings.

BANANA MUFFINS

[illegible] cup butter
4 teaspoons baking powder
[illegible] cup sugar
2 cups flour
1 egg
[illegible] teaspoon salt
1 cup milk
1½ cups bananas, cut [illegible] in cubes

Cream the butter. Add [illegible] [illegible] well beaten egg. Sift the baking powder [illegible] and [illegible]. Add [illegible] mixture alternately with the milk. Then fold in the bananas. Pour into greased muffin tins and bake at 400 F. for 25 minutes. Makes 12 small muffins.

EXERCISE IS IT'S OWN REWARD

By IDA JEAN KAIN

Copyright, 1937, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

SLIMNESS is not the same thing as thinness and remaking the figure into lovely lines takes more than diet. You must plan your exercise carefully, to reduce here and develop there, as your disproportionate measurements may require.

There is no beauty law against hip and bust measurements being the same. Some of the most glamorous screen stars can boast such figures.

But your hipline can exceed the bust by as much as two inches without loss of symmetry, and with even a moderate amount of daily exercise it is not trouble at all to keep the hip measurement within this limit. All we have to do is assure ourselves of this moderate amount of exercise.

This is not as easy as it sounds. Most of us sit from eight to 12 hours a day, and during this time however hard we work our hip and gluteal muscles are on a sit down strike. Instead of being firm, the gluteal and hip muscles tend to flabbiness from disuse—and the hipline takes on bulk.

If you don't think there is a difference between well-toned and flabby muscles, get out the tape measure and see for yourself. Stand in what you regard as your most comfortable position—perhaps a bit slumped as to waist and with hips held loosely. Take your hip measurement.

BALANCED REDUCING MENU

BREAKFAST	CALORIES
Orange Juice, ¾ glass	50
Poached egg on toast	150
Coffee, 1tsp cream, 1 rounded tsp sugar	50

DINNER
Meat loaf 2 slices	200
Chili sauce	20

TOTAL CALORIES	1085

Now without changing the position of the feet correct the posture. Stand as tall as you can make yourself then contract the hip and gluteal muscles to make this area firm before remeasuring. You will find a difference of from one to two inches.

Of course you cannot continually contract these muscles and we don't intend you should. You can, however, put these muscles in such healthy tone that they naturally hold the body to slimmer lines. At the same time the gradual removal of any excess fat by exercise is another good means for improvement of the measurement.

Your waist should be at least six inches smaller than the bust and if can be nine inches less. Of all the measurements the waist [illegible] most easily lost and the most easily regained. A few thorough stretching exercises every morning or night and morning are your most effective weapon against excess waistline.

You can take your choice of ways to stretch—standing up, lying down, bending over to touch the floor at the sides of the feet, or hanging from a horizontal bar. The main thing is to stretch for at least 10 minutes every day.

Now for that other important measurement, the bust. With most figures, where the hips and waist are too large the bust [illegible] too small.

Improvement of this measurement takes time and exercise which moves the arms at the [illegible] such as swimming or playing with a medicine ball, or the exercises contained in the Bust Development or [illegible] Reducing leaflets. You can improve this measurement.

You [illegible] have to coax yourself into a program of exercise that will make your figure over. You [illegible] sport such as badminton or swimming helps to arouse your enthusiasm for the formal calisthenics that concentrate on the specific points to measurements and outdoor activity is an [illegible] health and beauty builder. [illegible] you will find exercise is [illegible] improved [illegible] slim down.

Send for these leaflets: "Hips Hips Away," "Stretch the Fat From Waistline, Ribs and Wishbone," and either "Bust Reducing Exercises" or "Bust Development Exercises," as needed. Please enclose a large, stamped and addressed envelope. Follow these exercises daily to change your measurements to streamlines. Address Ida Jean Kain, Boston Evening American.

ADVICE on LOVE and MARRIAGE -:- By Beatrice Fairfax

Should A Man Postpone Marriage Until He Has Steady Job?

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

This has been the happiest year of my life and we planned to be married the middle of May.

But in the meantime HE has lost his job and his bank account is going down. He feels marriage would not be fair to me.

My mother offers to let us have her home very reasonably, but my fiance feels that unless he gets a job which will pay him not less than $35 a week we can't get along. I plan to keep my job after marriage.

We feel that we can't live without each other, and yet we don't want to do anything rash. We are both 27 years of age and have known each other for 17 years. DEAN.

Take Up Rowing And Live Forever | Syracuse Coach Active at 85

By JACK CONWAY

IF YOU WISH to live to a ripe old age and retain a keen mind I would suggest that you get interested in rowing.

Mr. Boston

Jim Ten Eyck, 85-year-old coach of the Syracuse varsity crew, which races Harvard, Cornell and Tech on the Charles river on Saturday afternoon, is best proof of my contention that the real Fountain of Youth can be found in the rowing game.

Old Jim has been interested in rowing for the three score and ten years that the poets like to say constitute the full life of the exceptional man. And at the age of 85 the famous rowing coach is telling folks how his youthful Syracuse oarsmen will show the way to their rivals in the coming test on the Charles river.

The Grand Old Man of Rowing does not try to get away from the fact his crew was defeated by the Navy and Princeton on Carnegie Lake. He merely mentions that the severe weather in upper New York state has handicapped his oarsmen, but that they will be ready to show at their best when they clash with the Crimson, Cornell and Tech here.

I find that men who retain an active interest in athletics laugh at the advancing years. Their bodies as well as their minds remain young.

* * *

HARVARD'S GREAT CREW

SYRACUSE, Cornell and Tech will be opposed by a great Harvard crew. It has already defeated Princeton, Columbia, Rutgers and Tech.

Head Coach Tommy Bolles says his boys at Cambridge have done everything asked of them in competition. The Harvard crew has improved with each race, and should be going on high when it sweeps into action on Saturday afternoon.

Cornell has hopes of winning the race on the Charles river, while there will be several changes in the Tech boat.

With good weather conditions, Saturday's race will be witnessed by 30,000 persons. The splendid showing of the Harvard crew this year has revived public interest in rowing.

The big crowd, of course, will be rooting for a Harvard victory, but I know it will take time out to give a cheer for Jim Ten Eyck. In dedicating his life to rowing, he has done much to interest thousands of young men in proper living. He has been a disciple of the thought of a sound mind in a sound body being the best way to gain real happiness.

ED DON GEORGE RETURNS

I TALKED with Ed Don George shortly after his arrival in Boston following his world's wrestling tour which took a year. It was just 12 months ago that the former world champion started the journey that took him to New Zealand, Australia, England, France and Germany.

I thought George would look a bit heavy, and was surprised when he didn't. He told me he weighs 230 pounds which was the notch at which he was when he started his tour.

"I found a lively interest in athletics in New Zealand and in Australia," said Ed. "Improved business conditions are partly responsible for this boom. In both of these countries, large prices are being received for wheat and wool.

"I drew $20,000 in my Paris bout with Henri DeGlane. Conditions are also fairly well in France. France has had to contend with sharp increase in the price of consumer goods. The French merchants increased the price of the goods on the shelves to offset the reduced value of the franc."

I asked George how he liked the European style of wrestling.

"It is much easier for a wrestler," said Don. "Punching, kicking and other rough tactics so common in American rings are barred. One follows more orthodox wrestling.

"The fans applaud when they get a little action. A wrestler can then apply himself to scoring with punishing holds which are effective even though not spectacular."

Now that he is back in the United States, Ed plans to bid for the world title. At the age of 31 he believes he is still good enough as a wrestler to defeat any man in the world.

George will make his first American mat appearance since his return home when he meets K. O. Koverly, one of the current bad men of wrestling, at a Paul Bowser show at the Garden on Friday night.

Dan O'Mahony, another former world champion, clashes with Rube Wright, while Tor Johnson battles Nick Lutze on the same card.

PASSING OF JORDAN

THE DEAL BY which Buck Jordan goes to the Reds closes a chapter in the career of a ball player who missed some of his baseball opportunities on account of frequent controversies with his club.

Jordan had the hold-out habit, and apart from losing the support of club officials and players he also took much valuable time out from needed practice.

Jordan is a natural hitter and if he had not got into so many disagreements with the management of the Bees he could have been of great service to the clan of McKechnie.

The sensational playing of youthful Elbie Fletcher, first sent South with the Bees following a poll of the fans taken by the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser, had much to do with the final decision on Jordan.

Fletcher has displayed such brilliant form around first base that it was a cinch Jordan never would be able to replace him. Elbie is one of the most graceful first basemen I have seen in action since the days of the great Hal Chase.

In addition to fielding brilliantly, Fletcher has displayed first class hitting power.

Jordan will receive an opportunity to redeem himself with the Reds. He will replace Les Scarsella at first base. The latter has had a poor season, and Jordan should not experience any difficulty gaining a regular berth with the Reds.

Cubs Boss Optimistic

SOUTHPAWS WHO CAN GO UP ANY TIME THEY'RE READY.

With Seven Good Men On Shelf

By JOE CASHMAN

That Charlie Grim guy is a wonder.

With seven players on the injured list, including three mound aces and the best catcher and most brilliant keystone combination in the league, the Cubs' pilot still retains his omnipresent smile and his sense of humor.

The loss of one important cog would send the average pilot to [illegible] loudly.

Tex Back Soon

And he has his makeshift lineup believing it, too, if we are to judge from what it showed while taming the Bees 6 to 2, on its first local appearance of the season.

"We've been hit hard," Grimm admits, "but crying over spilled milk doesn't help any. And it could have been worse.

"Larry French's broken hand is mending rapidly, and he's about ready to pitch again.

"Tex Carleton, who had a chipped bone in the elbow of his pitching arm, worked a couple of innings recently, and he'll be ready to start after two or three more such warm-ups.

"Gabby Hartnett's arm is getting stronger every day. Billy Herman and Bill Jurges should be back teaming around second base before long.

"Curt Davis is my big worry. He can't lift his pitching arm and, to make matters worse, the doctors can't find out what's the matter with the wing.

"No bones are broken. Some ligaments must be strained or torn. That's serious. It often keeps a player out for a whole season.

"But with all except Curt definitely on the improve, I have no license to complain, at least not while we keep on doing as well as we have been with these stars missing."

How's that for Pollyanna spirit?

Fears Pirates

Somebody mentioned to jolly "Cholly" that "Pie" Traynor had said the Cubs were the club to beat for the National League flag.

"I'd say that 'Pie's' Pirates were the club to beat," asserted the Bruins' boss, "but 'Pie' is right when he says we'll be dangerous.

"When we return to full strength, we'll be much stronger than we were finishing in a tie for second place last season.

"Ripper" Collins has bolstered our infield. Our outfield is bound to be stronger when Augie Galan, back in 1935 form, returns to his regular post.

"We no longer have Lon Warneke on the mound, but in his place we have Roy Parmelee, while Charlie Root is pitching the best ball of his long career, and "Lefty" Shoun, after a season at Birmingham, looks like a consistent winner.

"Yes, we'll have quite a ball club when our cripples are all healed."

Joe Marty, outfield sensation from the Coast League, for whom the Cubs paid in the vicinity of $50,000, hasn't yet proved another Joe DiMaggio, as some experts predicted he would, but he's satisfying his superiors.

"Marty has a chance to be a standout," Grimm opined. "His only fault is his temperament. He is inclined to fret too much about it if he happens to go a game or two without a hit. But he'll get over that. I like him."

Perifox Wins

Newmarket, Suffolk, May 13 (AP)—William Woodward's Perifox, dark horse candidate for the Epsom Derby, June 2, today won the Payne Stakes over 1½ miles, the Derby distance, defeating S. Tattersall's Elgar by two lengths. The Earl of Derby's Lazy Bones was third, four lengths behind Elgar, in the field of 10 three-year-olds.

Charlie O'Hara, Boston College junior, is being closely watched by the Boston Red Sox scouts. 'Tis whispered that when he completes his college career he'll get a tryout with the Hose.

John "Muggsy" Kelley, B. C. mound ace, can carve himself a big league career. The Chicago Cubs are reported to be very much interested in this young Eagle twirler.

Currier Girls Sail Gibbs to Victory

Tech's fleet of dingies were turned over to the girl sailors of Katherine Gibbs, Pembroke and Radcliffe colleges for a series of races, and the "Katie" Gibbs girls won out in a series of four races, winning on the efforts of the "veteran" salts, the Misses Constance and Carolyn Currier. These two girls won every first.

Dom Di Maggio Belts Out Homer

Oakland, Cal., May 13 (AP)—Another DiMaggio was in baseball's spotlight today, [illegible] brother of the New York Yankees' Joe DiMaggio, crashing out a homer and three other hits in [illegible] to help the San Francisco Seals whip Oakland 8 to 7.

Captain Cook

Providence, R. I., May 13—Alfred B. Cook of Milford, Mass., has been elected captain of the Brown freshman baseball team. He is a left fielder.

Roy Johnson Joins Bees

Roy Johnson, former Yankee and Red Sox slugger, reported to the Bees this morning and will play left field this afternoon against the Chicago Cubs.

He is tickled to be back in [illegible] baseball.

"I would rather play in Boston than in any other city.

"After playing every day for the past 10 or 11 years, it was hard on me to sit on the Yankees bench.

"I feel that I have plenty of baseball left in my system and many hits still on my bat. And there is no place in either of the major league circuits that I would rather finish my baseball career than in the old "Bean Town."

"The fans of Boston have always been kind to me and I don't think they will be any different now that I am returning in the senior league with a Bee uniform. I have met many of the present Bees and have always found them to be regular fellows and feel that they will make things pleasant for me now that I am going to be their team mate.

"National League Park will not be strange to me for I have played there several times in the City Series. So I won't feel strange in my new location. Also I rather enjoyed shagging flies in that spacious left field. It makes a fellow happy when he can extend himself to catch a fly ball rather than stand and watch it sail merrily over a short fence.

"I hope that I will be able to prove to Bob Quinn that he made no mistake in buying me from the junior league and that I will be in there trying my hardest.

"I have been rated a straightaway hitter and this field is just made to order for me. You know there are plenty of open space between those outfielders. I sure hope I can give the Bees the needed punch to put them back in a winning mood."

Checkers Moves Up and Over At Ard Righ

Roger Higgins' Checkers is one of many outstanding hunters entered in the annual Ard Righ show at Mrs. Edward C. Donnelly's estate in Dover on Saturday. Under the direction of Allan J. Wilson, the 1937 event promises to be a highlight of the social and show world season. New England's leading exhibitors are entered.

Ferrell Faces Auker In Tiger Lair

Detroit, May 13—Eden Auker and Wes Ferrell were slated to be the opposing pitchers as the Tigers and Red Sox came to grips here today in the one and only game of the series.

The opener was washed out by rain after two innings had been played.

After today's game both teams move, the Red Sox going to Washington to open a new set of games Saturday and the Tigers dashing [illegible] St. Louis to open with [illegible] Browns [illegible] From St. Louis the Tigers go East.

Auker Enigma

Best looking Tiger pitcher in the spring training camp, Auker won the opening game of the season against the Cleveland Indians and in three other starts since was knocked off the mound.

He is one of Mickey Cochrane's [illegible] mysteries. He is the only under-handed pitcher left in the major leagues, a delivery that [illegible] most clubs in 1935. He was not so successful last season.

Ferrell was to bid for a rubber [illegible] having split even in four [illegible] On his last time [illegible] a round rather [illegible] the White Sox.

The Tigers were leading here 1 to 0 when the game was halted.

Lefty Grove and Jake Wade were the opposing pitchers. Jo-Jo White [illegible] after he had singled and moved up on a [illegible] Rogell.

Charley Gehringer popped out [illegible] to sacrifice, but Greenberg [illegible] a single to left and White came home. Walker flied to Mel Almada who threw out Rogell at the plate for a double play.

After that Grove settled down and downed the Tigers in order in the second inning. Wade pitched well for Detroit in the abbreviated affair. Roger Cramer made one hit, a flukey double.

What the Stars Did

DUCKY MEDWICK, Cardinals—Hit two homers and two doubles, driving in five runs, in 15-3 win over Phillies.

BILL SWIFT, Pirates—Summoned as relief pitcher, he fanned two batters to end rally and hurled three hitless innings to beat Giants, 6-5.

CHARLEY ROOT, Cubs—Muffled Bees with five hits for 6-2 victory.

ZEKE BONURA, White Sox—Hit homer and two singles, driving in three runs in 13-5 win over Senators.

MAX BUTCHER, Dodgers—Stopped Reds with five hits for 5-1 win.

FULLER'S Bout With Andy OFF TO MAY 24

Because a blaze destroyed his home in Chelsea, Sammy Fuller's bout with Andy Callahan has been postponed by the Goodwin A. C. to Monday night, May 24, at Fenway Park. The bout was originally scheduled for next Monday.

Completely upset by the fire which forced him to find a new home for his wife and kiddies, Fuller asked Promoter Rip Valenti to give him another week before stepping in for his seventh clash with the Lawrence Irishman.

Fuller pointed out that it would take a week to get his home straightened out and doesn't want to go into the ring with Callahan unless in peak condition.

Sammy's chief regret was the destruction of several books of clippings and other trophies of the ring which were his proudest possessions.

Powell Rests Well

New York, May 13 (INS)—Jack Powell, New York Yankee outfielder, was reported as resting comfortably today following an appendectomy. He is expected to be out of the lineup for at least six weeks.

CASEY, Kelly on Bike BOARD

ENTRY BLANKS READY SOON

Edward L. Casey, former football coach at Harvard, now director of the Massachusetts Youth Administration, and Daniel J. Kelly, state boxing commissioner, have become [illegible] with the committee working on the second annual Jefferson Club bicycle marathon of June 6.

[illegible] Casey and Kelly [illegible] sports [illegible] worthwhile project.

Casey's letter of acceptance to President Daniel F. O'Brien [illegible] to become a committee member follows:

"Dear Mr. O'Brien:

"Thank you very much for your invitation to become a member of the committee for the annual boys' bicycle marathon of the Jefferson Club. I appreciate the honor and gladly accept it.

"I remember how interesting last year's bicycle marathon was, and the large number of boys who competed. It seems to me you are doing a worthwhile thing in providing wholesome recreation for the young people in this part of the Commonwealth.

"Sincerely yours,

Kelly wrote:

"I shall be only too honored and pleased to serve on your committee and will be present at your meetings."

Other prominent men of sports and business are rallying to the bike marathon standard. So that the race will be run with the finest possible supervision [illegible] every precaution to safeguard the best interests of the boys.

An entry blank will appear shortly. All boys in New England [illegible] residing and between the ages of 11 and 18, are eligible to take part.

Four-way Tie in WGA Play Possible

By BILL GRIMES

There's far more than the usual amount of interest centered around the outcome of today's Women's Golf Association of Massachusetts district team matches, for victories by The Country Club and Central will create a four-cornered first place tie, with only two matches remaining to be played.

Going into the eighth round, Middlesex and Midland districts are deadlocked in the honor position.

ANN MARSTERS' BEST BETS FOR TODAY

ANN MARSTERS

Ann Marsters, girl handicapper, today picked PAYRACK to win the sixth race at Narragansett Park, while DONALD DUCK was her choice to finish out front in the seventh.

Jockey Johnny Barba will be up on PAYRACK which assures this horse of a good ride.

ANN MARSTERS' BEST BETS

$2 Win, Payrack, Narragansett 6th.
$2 Win, Donald Duck, Narragansett 7th
BANKROLL $474.80 DAY'S PLAY $4.

DONALD DUCK ran a good race in his last start and will make a strong bid for first place today.

Miss Marsters is wagering $2 on each of her choices today.

Miss Marsters has accepted an offer of $1000 from Walter O'Hara, under the terms of which $500 has been given to the Christmas Basket Fund of the Boston Evening American-Sunday Advertiser and the other $500 is being used as a betting stake.

Miss Marsters is trying to prove by conservative betting it is possible to beat the races.

Miss Marsters makes only two wagers a day.

The balance in her betting stake at the end of her experiment will be turned over to the Basket Fund.

BEST BET—ALBUQUERQUE, 6TH RACE

Narragansett Park, May 13—Albuquerque, dropping down from a highly creditable fourth in $2000 company, should encounter little difficulty in mastering platers of the $1600 variety slated to oppose him in the mile and one-sixteenth of the sixth stanza here today.

FIRST—Aero, Tartarus, Teddy Beau

[illegible] AERO appears [illegible] a decided edge over this [illegible] The C. T. Grayson [illegible] Havre de [illegible] TARTARUS. The latter [illegible] TEDDY BEAU [illegible]

SECOND—Glynna, Laddie Stone, High Treason

GLYNNA [illegible] performance in [illegible] her season [illegible] LADDIE STONE [illegible] two and one [illegible] HIGH [illegible] Has been away [illegible] last summer.

THIRD—Pass Shot, Bay Sister, Palatine

FOURTH—Soda Time, Shred, Exum

FIFTH—Erin Torch, Black Highbrow, Sound Advice

ERIN TORCH found the mile [illegible] staying powers. In a previous race over this same route the Dixiana colorbearer turned in a sparkling score [illegible] Lady H[illegible] [illegible] honors by a head. BLACK HIGHBROW stepped six furlongs in 1:13 1-5 to win as his rider pleased from Happy Knot and others on the opening day. The D. J. Sullivan 3rd colorbearer is stepping up in class, but he also drops five pounds in actual weight. It looks like a two-horse race. SOUND ADVICE for the remainder.

SIXTH—Albuquerque, Rutland, Mannerly

ALBUQUERQUE will probably have RUTLAND to [illegible] for major honors. The latter [illegible] not do at all badly in placing to Kapera the other day. MANNERLY was heavily backed in better company the other day but failed to show a thing. May do better here.

SEVENTH—Slavka, Donald Duck, Watchfully

SLAVKA, pitted too highly in [illegible] is ideally suited by all conditions in the $1500 claimer. Under a hustling ride he may lead from flag fall to wire. DONALD DUCK came from out of the clouds to finish a bang-up fourth to Texine in his last start. WATCHFULLY, in general form, shapes up next best.

EIGHTH—Bright Bird, Adamite, Coltman

BRIGHT BIRD, which showed excellent speed in better company the other day, may make every post a winning one. The opposition is little more than he has drubbed in the past. COLTMAN, on the slowside in last race, may be a wake-up possibility.

Riding Winged Pegasi at Jamaica Oval

Jockeys look as if they were riding winged steeds as they thunder down the stretch in the opening race on the mid-week card at the Jamaica, L. I., track. As the first four runners approach the finish line, all hooves are off the ground simultaneously with the camera's click. Our Ketcham (left) won. Coal King (right) was second. Papa Jack ran third.

MANAGER'S INSTRUCTIONS NO LONGER MEAN A THING

Freddie Steele, middleweight champion, proved himself worthy of his title recently when he knocked out Frank Battaglia, a promising Canadian boxer, in Seattle. The lad from across the border never was in the contention, although reputed to be one of the hardest hitters in the game. Steele tagged him in the first round and completed his task in the third stanza. The above photos show how a champion turns the trick.

'37 Grid Prospects Bright at Yale

New Haven, Ct., May 13 (AP)—A preview of Yale's 1937 football situation, as unreeled by four weeks of spring practice, indicates optimism, not entirely unalloyed, can safely be the watchword of the campus.

For the first [illegible] the [illegible] will be two and [illegible] even three [illegible] but this is [illegible] by a dearth of [illegible] material in them.

With [illegible] brilliant backs led by Captain Clint Frank, all-America [illegible] season, and the center [illegible] Head Coach Raymond W. (Ducky) Pond and [illegible] assistants have been [illegible] the [illegible] and [illegible].

Frosh Strong

The spring drills convinced the coaches they can't expect very much from last year's freshman eleven, and emphasized how difficult it will be to replace Larry (The Great) Kelley, the All America end who led the Bulldog to seven [illegible] starts last fall.

Hopes [illegible] of picking up where Kelley leaves off is [illegible] of Columbus, O., freshman back two years ago, but ineligible last season. Frick Hixon, reserve last fall, showed up well.

Although Bill John, Regular in 1936 [illegible] the other tackle post is wide open. Bill Platt, sub center last season and John Starbuck, 200-pound freshman guard, are regarded as possibilities.

Frank Gallagher, on probation last Fall, is counted on, but is getting a good run from Bill Stack, last season's freshman leader.

Five first class guards are on hand: Jack Castle, Bill Dickens, Felix Carracciola, Charley Miller and Stu Hemingway, the last a sophomore.

The main joy lies in the backfield, where only Bud Miles of the first-class ball carriers will be lost. In addition, Clem Kite, Hank Cheney, Everett Hamilton and Jim McClelland look good.

The inevitable adjustment will have to be made in Yale's offense, Coach Pond pointed out, especially in pass plays now that opponents will no longer have to put two men on Kelley.

"In the main," said Pond, "we will continue the conventional single wingback, either spread or close-up, operating behind an unbalanced line."

GEORGE, Danno, Robert IN TOWN

There was a parade of wrestling champions, former champions and near-champions into Boston today for tomorrow night's triple-windup program at Boston Garden.

Ed Don George, twice world champion; Yvon Robert, the present titleholder, and Dan O'Mahony, dethroned last summer at Montreal by Robert, are all here.

George and O'Mahony will have stellar parts in tomorrow's triple-windup and Robert will be a spectator.

George takes on George (K. O.) Koverly, who gave up a pugilistic career to incite riots in wrestling arenas.

O'Mahony tangles with Rube Wright, 260-pound Texan who recently forced Steve (Crusher) Casey to the limit in a bout at the Garden.

The third contest of the three-way headline menu sends Tor Johnson, 365-pound Swede, against clever Nick Lutze of California.

It will be Tor's toughest Boston assignment.

George, recently returned from a tour of the world, appears in even better condition than when he left here nearly two years ago.

Mass. Canoe Clubs Enter Hearst Tilt

New York, May 13—Metropolitan New York will see its first real regatta this Sunday, when the Hearst newspapers with the co-operation of the Middle Atlantic Outboard Association and the American Canoe Association present a dual attraction, the Albany to New York motorboat marathon and the Middle Atlantic canoe championships.

Entries in both of these thrilling events are anticipated to reach record proportions. Both are the curtain raisers of activity in their respective sports in the East.

William Yeager of the American Canoe Association reports the receipt of more than 30 entries for the card of seven dash events and the feature one mile [illegible] double blade race, with out-of-town clubs well represented.

From the nation's capital the Washington D. C. [illegible] club is sending its [illegible] high-point championship team to compete for the raft of gold, silver and bronze medals being awarded for first, second and third places.

Due to recent floods which have washed away their clubhouse and demolished their equipment, it will be necessary for the local clubs to supply boats to the six-man Washington team. The Dedham and Needham, Mass., Canoe clubs will also send representatives.

The paddling contests will be started at 11 a. m. and will be run from the foot of the Dyckman Street ferry slip to a point off DeGeorge's boathouse approximately 300 meters, which incidentally is also the finish line for the motorboat marathon.

Many of the power boat pilots have already arrived in Albany. They will spend the next few days making final adjustments to their marathon rigs and [illegible] spins. Others will continue to pour into the state capital up to midnight before the race.

Name U. S. Team That Invades Japan

New York, May 13 (INS). Members of the squad of the American swimming team which will compete in Japan this summer were announced here today by the A. A. U.

They are Katherine Rawls, Miami Beach; Adolf Kiefer, Chicago; John Higgens, Providence, and Elbert Root, Detroit.

Weir Shows 'Em Something at Portland

(This is the fifth of a series of articles by Billy Weir, sensational young rookie hurler of the Boston Bees, telling how he jumped to the majors from college.)

By BILL WEIR
(As Told to Joe Cashman)
Chapter V

I attracted big league scouts for the first time during the Summer of 1935.

I was pitching for the Burnham and Morrill team in the Portland, Me., Twilight League.

Martin Allen, an executive of the firm and a great baseball fan, decided to organize a team which would give college players a chance to earn money during vacation to continue their education and at the same time furnish Portland the best brand of semi-pro ball possible.

He signed Marty McHale, high and Earl Larsen from Colgate, Ed Harlow and "Babe" Young from Fordham, Phil Clark from Dartmouth, Sonny Dwyer and Jit Ricker from Bowdoin and Halgren from Colby.

To these he added such veteran pro players as Hormides Aine, formerly of the Yanks, and Cliff Grey.

Paid Well

We played every day, and our routine was similar to that in the big leagues.

Allen achieved his objective. We were paid well, and we played good ball. We won the semi-pro championship of Maine after capturing the Pine Tree League and Portland Twilight League titles.

And major league scouts were hot on our trails.

McHale [illegible] signed with the Yanks and Young signed with the Giants.

Larsen, late with the Bees, could have signed. So could I. But we decided to complete our college courses before considering pro ball.

So I returned to the University of New Hampshire and as was my annual fall custom pitched Sunday ball for semi-pro teams in nearby towns until cold weather set in.

No-Hitter

It was that fall that I had the misfortune to hit the second of the two batters I have 'beaned' during my pitching career.

H[illegible] North C[illegible] against [illegible] I th[illegible] a fast ball [illegible] left handed hitter [illegible] Fiske [illegible] struck [illegible] head in the way of the pitch and his nose was [illegible] all over his face.

The nose was badly broken and it required several [illegible] to close the wound.

A southpaw pitcher is supposed to have much more success against left handed hitters than against right handers, but ever since I hit Fiske I've had more luck against and would rather face right-handers.

There must have been plenty of right-handed hitters on the teams I faced during my last season with the Wildcats, because I managed to finish without a defeat.

The closest I came to losing was against Dartmouth. That game went 12 innings to a tie. I struck out 18 but I had only myself to blame for not winning. I tossed away a three-run lead.

I pitched the second no-hit, no-run game of my career also that season. Northeastern University was the victim.

I understand that Bob Quinn, president of the Bees, saw me in action for the first time that day.

Perkins Smart

Representatives of other big league clubs had looked me over in earlier games.

Ira Thomas, scout for the Philadelphia Athletics, said I was too small ever to be a winning pitcher in the majors.

Paul Krichell of the Yankees thought I might do after a year or two in the minors.

Detroit scouts got me to work out with the Tigers at Fenway Park and Coach Cy Perkins wanted me to leave with the team that very night for New York.

Then I heard the Bees were interested in me.

BILL'S BUDDY

Earl Larsen, former Colgate infielder, who first played with Billy Weir on Portland Semi-pro Club. Earl was with Bill again this spring in Bees training camp. He was farmed.

HARVARD DEAN FAILS TO FIND CURLEY 'SLUR'

Investigation has failed to disclose that any professor [illegible] at former Governor Curley or that his name was even mentioned in any class discussion, [illegible] M. Morgan, Jr., of Harvard Law School, declared [illegible].

Furthermore, said Dean Morgan, no letter of resignation from the law school has been received from the former Governor's son Leo and the entire affair is a mystery as far as he is concerned.

Leo, it was disclosed last night, had reported to his father that a first-year professor had insulted the former Governor in open class.

Young Curley said he took the professor to task and received an apology, but that he felt so strongly about the matter he wanted to resign. His father [illegible] him to do so.

According to young Curley, a student asked the professor [illegible] a question about former Mayor William Thompson of Chicago. The professor, according to Curley, replied that Thompson was corrupt but people kept on re-electing him much in the same fashion as the people of Boston would elect Curley mayor of Boston next November.

Commenting on his son's resignation, the former governor said, a bit heatedly:

"My son is a good student. He was doing well in his class work, and seemed to his father at least to give good promise of one day becoming a successful lawyer. The professor did not assert I was corrupt, but there was a nasty implication in his words."

Police Pick Locks Of 142 Closed N. Y. Playgrounds

New York, May 13 (AP)—Thousands of New York City children went to play under police protection today.

One hundred and forty-two playgrounds were opened after police had picked or broken locks belonging to the Works Progress Administration in a dispute involving Mayor F. H. LaGuardia, who took part by long-distance telephone on his way to the West Coast; Colonel Brehon B. Somervell, WPA administrator; Police Commissioner Lewis J. Valentine, and Park Commissioner Robert Moses.

The battle began when Moses ordered the playgrounds closed, blaming the WPA for withdrawing park and playground workers. Then came an order from the mayor, signed before he had left, in anticipation of the trouble, opening the playgrounds again.

The police commissioner tried to carry out the mayor's order, but Moses refused to provide keys for the locks.

Clothed Bather Nabbed by Police

Early morning strollers on Summer street today blinked incredulously at a water-soaked figure wearing a felt crown and a heavy beard pulled himself up from the Fort Point channel bridge and strolled jauntily down the street.

Picked up by cruising members of the police headquarters squad, "King Neptune" gave his name as Beecher Ramsey and told police he lived on a houseboat moored near the bridge.

Treated at the Haymarket relief station for immersion, Ramsey said he had slipped while attempting to board his boat and, once in the water, felt so fine he decided to take a swim. He was on his way back "home" for a change of clothing when picked up.

"Babe in Woods" Off Danger List

Whitinsville, May 13.—It was expected that Baby Wenona L. Nelson, two-year-old Upton girl, would today spend her first full day out of the oxygen tank at the local hospital.

So rapid has been Wenona's recent recovery from her experiences of wandering four days in woodlands that her name has come off the danger list. She [illegible] at the hospital as a [illegible].

Call Axe-Death Case of Suicide

State detectives are now ready to regard the death of Thaddeus J. Grautski, Pepperell farmer, a case of suicide. For some time without success police investigated the death as a probable murder. Captain John F. Stokes of the state police reports records in his office reveal several cases of suicide where insane persons have used axes on themselves.

False Teeth In Litter

London, May 13—Workmen tearing down stands in Pall Mall and Whitehall after the coronation found 116 umbrellas, 11 walking sticks, 12 flasks, 16 coats, 12 rugs, three portable cooking stoves, scores of gloves, two suitcases and one pair of false teeth—all abandoned by a throng gone joyously mad.

West Roxbury Girl, 14, Missing

Natalie Malaguti, 14, of Beach street, West Roxbury, was being sought by police today as a missing person. Dressed in plain clothes and carrying a library book, Natalie walked out of her home last evening telling her parents she would be back within 10 minutes.

State police were asked to watch for her in the hope that she might have gone to visit relatives.

N. E. TRADE

Seasonal SLACKENING Appears

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

Major New England industries still have enough business on hand to carry them forward for several weeks yet on the present level of production.

The longer range view, however, is for some slackening of activity. New orders came in more slowly in the past few weeks and trading in raw materials fell off considerably, with consequent price weakness.

While these general views of the trade situation, gleaned from the current review of Dun & Bradstreet, are not as optimistic as those we have been accustomed to in recent months, it is to be remembered that seasonal influences are at work and a period of quiet is to be expected. But in one direction at least there is real activity. Construction permits in Massachusetts in the past four [illegible] according to the State [illegible] of Labor and Industries. [illegible] losses in [illegible]

• • •

Apropos of the New England trade outlook is word from the Bureau of Agricultural Economics that wool consumption by U. S. mills so far this year has proceeded at a rate higher than in any year since 1933. The bureau also says that while there have been no indications of a recession it is possible that the recent high rate of activity has been at the expense of volume later in the year. In connection with this it is interesting to note the Dun & Bradstreet weekly review points out that very few orders for woolen or worsted yarns are being received.

• • •

[illegible] consumption [illegible] several weeks [illegible] have caused a sagging of prices [illegible] the strong position of wool itself actual orders are made [illegible] price as usual.

• • •

Stock prices have now entered the cyclical phase which is the bane of the market observers' existence. There is always the question of whether or not prices will hold previous low points and if they will what groups should be favored. For our part the answer is still obscured by trade and political factors. The rails look promising and as noted here previously the granger roads are probably a purchase on dips. But for the present at least that is all we can see insofar as nearby profits are concerned. The list as a whole seems doomed to several weeks, at least, of quiet.

• • •

At the risk of repetition this writer wants to point out once again that the sensible course to [illegible] at this juncture is to study the action of the real [illegible] issues. They are the [illegible] upside leaders and [illegible] observation investors and traders can avail themselves of [illegible] opportunities somewhere [illegible]

Notebook: Some concern over the relation of copper production and consumption is noticeable in State Street circles . . . But leading copper stocks have already had a big decline and second quarter reports seem almost certain to be better than in the first quarter, so these fears may not find full reflection in the market . . . And finally the copper trade reports a pickup in sales is now in evidence after a lull of several weeks . . . The decline of the utilities to new lows is disconcerting . . . Coming at this time the whole market is in danger of being upset as the other two averages hover close to their low points.

STOCKS Break 1 to 5 POINTS

LABOR UPSET IS FACTOR

New Yor, May 13—Fresh labor difficulties in steel and motor centers today kicked the props from under the stock market.

Leading issues slumped 1 to 5 points generally with a few off much more in dealings that occasionally put the ticker tape behind. Numerous new lows for the year or longer were posted.

Industrials and utilities led the fast retreat. Rails held fairly well for a time, but they eventually met selling pressure. There were one or two attempts to rally the list, but volume dwindled and renewed declines put prices around their lowest levels near the final hour.

Bonds and commodities were uneven. Rubber futures toppled following announcement Germany had decreed an import tax on this staple.

Touching off the tumble in shares was the calling of a strike at plants of the Jones & Laughlin Steel Company and threats of unionization difficulties for other independent steel concerns. It was the first major upset in the steel industry in 18 years.

First to Slide

U. S. Steel was among the first to slide. Trailing it were Bethlehem, National Steel, American Rolling Mill, Republic, Youngstown Sheet & Tube, General Motors, Chrysler, Yellow Truck, U. S. Rubber, Goodyear, Goodrich, Douglas Aircraft, American Telephone, Anaconda, [illegible] American Smelting, International Nickel, J. I. Case, Standard Oil of N. J., Continental Oil, Texas Corp., Loew's, [illegible]tex, Cluett Peabody, International Paper & Power Preferred and National Supply.

New low bottoms were touched by Western Union, Consolidated Edison, North American, American Water Works, Brooklyn Union Gas, National Power & Light, Seaboard Oil, Montgomery Ward, American Tobacco "B," Barnsdall, Penick & Ford and Paramount.

Current Items

Helping to dampen speculative sentiment before opening was the strike at the plants of the Jones & Laughlin Steel Co.

On the brighter side of the market picture were predictions sales of automobiles during the current month will materially exceed the April level and register a substantial increase over last year.

Nervousness of motor truck company stock lately was said to be in line with estimates of observers in this field, indicating expanding wage and material costs may make inroads into profit margins this year. It was believed doubtful, though, that manufacturers would attempt to boost prices before the appearance of 1938 models.

At the beginning of foreign exchange transactions sterling was unchanged at $4.94⅝. The French franc was off .000⅜ of a cent at 4.48⅛ cents.

HANEY ON FINANCES

U. S. Gold Standard FINE FOR FOREIGNERS, But Bad for Citizens

By LEWIS HANEY
(Professor of Economics, New York University)

New York, May 13—Signs are beginning to appear that either the leading nations must return to the gold standard or else a renewed currency warfare will be probable.

We have been holding the bag for gold.

Our so-called "price" of gold has been available only to foreign holders (and newly mined gold). There is neither convertibility nor a gold market for us.

As a result the domestic purchasing power of the paper dollar has had no direct relation to the value of gold. And our paper "price" of gold has had no direct relation to the value of gold in the world market.

This fantastic situation is the result of the ideas and schemes of our currency managers. It is just another way of saying that we neither have any standard of value nor is our currency directly related to any standard of value.

The dollar is just government credit.

But, as I say, we hold the bag for others. We offer to buy foreign gold at a fixed price of $35 an ounce. This really means that we will give foreigners 13.9 grains of pure gold for each paper dollar they turn in for redemption. We ourselves can't get a grain of gold for a paper dollar; but a foreigner can.

Thus we are maintaining a sort of gold standard for England and Holland. Whenever they want to they exchange their currencies for dollars. Then they convert the dollars into gold, getting an ounce for 35 of them.

In April, over $215,000,000 in gold came in, mostly from the United Kingdom, Japan, Canada, Belgium and India. The chief reasons are: (1) The undervalued dollar, (2) flight of capital from foreign uncertainties, and (3) need of stabilizing foreign exchanges (Japan).

But this performance, like the devaluation race, is nearing the limit. We are too "smart" and overdid the devaluing of the gold dollar. And, since paper dollars are not freely exchangeable for gold, we left the paper dollar badly overvalued. (In fact, the authorities wanted it so—at first! They wanted reflation and rising prices.)

As a result we are in an impossible position. If we [illegible] foreigners to send their gold over here we face a [illegible]. If we "sterilize" the gold we increase our huge public debt and allow no end to the gold flow.

If we maintain or raise the "price" of gold we stimulate overproduction and threaten the value of the metal. If we lower the price, we threaten a deflationary collapse.

Just now, we find England and Holland "co-operating" in checking the flow of gold to this country. The Bank of England has just bought $41,000,000 worth of gold, increasing the reserve to 2.6 billion dollars in terms of our money. The English stabilization fund has bought gold in the London open market at the pound equivalent of $35 an ounce. Of course, this puts the pound up in comparison with the dollar.

Holland, too, has begun to tie the guilder to the pound and to buy gold.

In both cases, dollars are sold.

One result is that the shipment of gold to the United States has decreased sharply.

There are a good many reasons for this "co-operation," including some capital withdrawals from this country, political pressure from English gold producing areas, etc.

The underlying reason, however, is a growing recognition that there must be some standard of value in the world—some basis for measuring relative values that can be generally recognized. This recognition is brought to a head by our gold dilemma, which makes everybody fear that the administration will "do something" to gold. It makes England fear for the tripartite agreement which is so convenient for her.

And as gold accumulates in England and Holland they [illegible] fear lest their reserves, like ours, may lose value through lack of use!

The logical outcome should be the establishment of free gold markets in France and the United States, as a preliminary to determining new pars of exchange among the currencies and restoring a gold standard.

The chief obstacles are the unbalanced budgets in these New Deal countries.

CURE For Labor ILLS

POLICIES LISTED

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER
(Copyright, 1937, by Universal Service)

New York, May 13—Industrial relations in the United States could be fostered by applying the viewpoint of the sales department to the personnel management bureau.

The sales-minded executive does not start out with a series of [illegible] and preconceptions as to what his customers [illegible]. He [illegible] tastes and desires.

He finds it is more profitable to make and sell what the public wants and needs, rather than [illegible] force something [illegible].

[illegible]

Strike Prevention

A [illegible] and progressive [illegible] W. Hook [illegible] of New Haven [illegible] and head [illegible] New England Council has [illegible] strike prevention policies.

"There are," he pointed out, "many things which the employer can do to remove the underlying causes of labor difficulties. The first is to keep in touch with the trends in employee opinions that are developing all about him. One of these trends obviously is the shorter week.

"Another trend is an enlivened consciousness on the part of labor and the public of the need for better working conditions in plants including better plant housekeeping, better sanitary conditions and better heating and lighting. When a strike threat looms in a plant that is deficient in these matters, the local newspapers and the public generally sympathize with the workers.

"A third trend is the increasing hope of employees that they may some day be provided with steady work and security in old age. Generally speaking, they understand the difficulties involved, but they want employers to show sympathy for the objective and do all in their power to bring it about.

"The fourth trend is the demand on the part of employes for ways and means to reach their employers without prejudice, when they have a grievance. The employer who looks upon a complaint of one of his men as a nuisance or a personal affront is not helping to make labor problems less acute.

"In my experience about 95 per cent of the complaints of employes can be ironed out almost instantly once they are brought to the attention of the employer. The difficulty lies in getting the complaint up front. The employe doesn't like to risk presenting it himself. He wants his co-workers to join with him so that any resentment which may be aroused will not fall on himself alone. This is where the demand for collective bargaining is born."

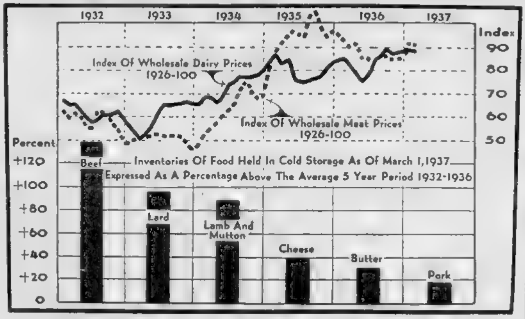
Storage Holdings of Food Increased



Inventories of various foods held in cold storage on March 1 ranged from 20 to 140 per cent above the average inventory supplies of the same commodity held during the period 1932-36, according to the United States Department of Agriculture.

While these cold storage inventories may be high, substantial reductions are expected within a few months, especially in beef and lard, where the demand is heavy and new available supplies are relatively light.

Wholesale prices of meats and dairy products declined slightly in February. As measured by the Bureau of Labor Statistics, index prices of these two food groups are now about 10 per cent below the 1926 base year.

Cites Dangers of Barriers to Commerce

French Lick, Ind., May 13 (AP)—Civilization will go completely bankrupt unless world trade channels are cleared for a freer flow of international goods, the Bankers Association for Foreign Trade was told here today by its president, W. F. Gephart, vice president of the First National Bank of St. Louis.

Ernest G. Draper, Assistant Secretary of Commerce, described "invisible" exports and imports as a substantial part of our normal international business.

"Our most important 'invisible' import," Draper said in his address, which was read by an assistant, Amos E. Taylor, "is the total expenditure of our tourists abroad.

"The increase in our travel outlays abroad from $409,000,000 in 1934 to $495,000,000 in 1936 reflects a corresponding improvement in the income of the American people."

Gephart said "political and not economic considerations" have erected barriers to world commerce.

25 Years Ago

New York, May 13 (INS)—U. S. Steel backlog April 30 was 5,604,885 tons.

Prices of bars, plates, structural steel raised $2 ton.

First quarter anthracite shipments set 10-year record of 18,209,351 tons.

CURB Price Trend LOWER

New York, May 14 (AP)—Further light selling put most curb leaders on a fractionally lower plane today.

Utilities and oils had little support and yielded ground over a wide front. Lake Shore Mines and Sunshine Mining were slightly higher.

Some industrial specialties had losses of a point or more and Acme Wire voting trust certificates dropped 3 on small trades.

Gulf Oil, American Gas & Electric, Northern States Power "A," United Light & Power "A" and Arkansas Natural Gas "A" gave up ¼ to ½ with little show of resistance.

Long Lines 'Phone Business Up

The long lines business of telephone companies is currently running well above preliminary estimates for 1937, Carl I. Wheat, telephone counsel for the Federal Communications Commission, said in an address before the Federal Bar Association here.

Mr. Wheat also stated that the rate reductions of approximately $12,000,000 announced in January would actually result in a saving to the public of around $12,500,000 due to methods used in setting up the new rate schedules. The net loss to the utility will be about $8,000,000 because of stimulation in business as a result of the reduction.

Cluett, Peabody Plans to Split Common

A special meeting of stockholders of Cluett, Peabody & Co., Inc., has been called June 11 in Troy, N. Y., to authorize division of each share of common stock into three shares of the same class and to change stated value to $6.50 a share, it was announced in a letter mailed to stockholders.

Stockholders also were informed that after the proposed split-up becomes effective, company proposes to offer to holders the privilege of purchasing additional shares of new common in ratio of one share for each five held. It is expected Goldman, Sachs & Co. will head an underwriting group to be formed in connection with this offering.

Proceeds of the proposed offering will be used for additional working capital to finance increased inventories and accounts receivable as well as for certain additions to plant facilities which have been made necessary by continued improvement in the company's business.

Wall Street Hears

New York, May 13 (INS)—That United Aircraft's (UAR) volume of business this year is expected to run close to $25,000,000.

That a dividend of 50 cents, the same as paid three months ago, is likely to be voted by Kennecott (KN) next week.

That American Hide & Leather (HI) in the fiscal year ending June 30 will approximate 40 cents a share on the common.

INFINITE Work Looms AHEAD

SOME COMING DEVELOPMENTS

By B. C. FORBES

Those who look upon America as almost a finished product, who feel that there is not a great deal of work remaining to be done, should note, particularly, how modernization demands have multiplied.

Judging by current trends of action and thought, the prospect is that:

[illegible] of modern construction and equipment will be built.

Modernization of every kind of facility and furnishing and furniture in homes will expand beyond all present computation.

Practically all of our existing railway rolling stock will be scrapped at an accelerated pace during the measurable future, revolutionized locomotives will become all the vogue, freight cars of today will be supplanted by others more efficient and more varied, passenger locomotives will continue to be drastically improved.

The merest beginning has been made in building overhead highways to permit of fast travel by motor vehicles. [illegible] will be spent in [illegible] and streets built in horse-and-buggy days can easily be envisioned. Overhead and underground crossings will most certainly become the rule rather than the exception.

Housing Demands

Home building, still conducted very largely as conducted for ages, will be revolutionized along lines of mass production and greatly reduced costs.

Modernization demands for office appliances, already swamping leading companies, promises to spread and spread because of considerations of space-saving, time-saving, efficiency and comfort.

Air-conditioning, heretofore costly and relatively uncommon, is destined to come into nation-wide use in homes, offices, factories, establishments of all classes.

Aircraft will grow into a [illegible] industry.

The application of electricity to uses today dimly imagined is sure to become one of the marvels of tomorrow—already it has been demonstrated that plants can be made to grow faster, that hens can be made to lay more eggs by scientific utilization of electricity.

No, America is very far from being a finished product. Hardly a start has been made in properly satisfying human needs and aspirations. That infinitely greater progress will be achieved hereafter than heretofore only an astigmatic pessimist believes.

Vigilance Needed

The assumption that this land of infinite natural resources, matchless brain power, irrepressible optimism, unparalleled inventive genius, limitless energy at home, [illegible] ambition and aspirations will be content to grind along in old grooves and be satisfied with old things and old ways and that we are doomed to support millions and millions of people in idleness [illegible] abject defeatism.

The last words of Empire Builder Cecil Rhodes, "so much to do, so little done," apply to this youthful continent.

But vigilance must be exercised against allowing [illegible] governing bodies to [illegible] initiative and sap national vitality by imposing crushing taxation, the ruination of great peoples in the past. Such a trend admittedly has characterized the New Deal. But it is not unreasonable to hope that Americans will come to their senses in time to check [illegible] governmental policies and practices before it is too late.

Here are companies [illegible] large [illegible] first quarter of 1937 compared with last year:

Company	Per Cent Increase
Baldwin Locomotive	127.6
Acme Steel	97.3
Western Auto Supply	65.0
Mead Corporation	63.8
Yellow Truck & Coach	62.2
Doehler Die Cast Co.	56.7
Ruberoid Co.	57.6
Johns-Manville	51.6
Minn. Honeywell Reg.	48.8
Otis Elevator	48.3
Caterpillar Tractor	44.6
Hercules Powder	44.1
Sharon Steel	44.2
General Electric	42.8
Granite City Steel	41.9
Spiegel, Inc.	39.9
Edison Brothers Stores	39.7
Union Oil	37.6
Westinghouse	37.3
Mengel Co.	37.1
Interchemical Corp.	36.0
Am. Radiator & S. S. Co.	34.8
Montgomery Ward	30.1

However, increased sales do not always mean increased profits. The National City Bank of New York has made the following analysis of a "sample group of 40 large manufacturing corporations":

	Sales (000 Omitted)	Net Profit 1936	P. C. Profit
1936
1st Quar.	$892,062	$95,699	11.7
4th Quar.	1,066,051	144,101	13.5
1937
1st Quar.	$892,062	$95,699	11.7

The profit outlook for the rest of the year is beclouded by rising labor, material, tax costs.

Radioland Reflections

By N. F. T.

LET the barrage come, but here's to say that the British broadcasters, meaning the "mike" men doing descriptive [illegible] have it over our blatant boys four ways from the middle. Those who did the gala London goings on yesterday and last night as heard by these ears, handled their tasks in truly top notch fashion.

No doubt the superior style of announcing and narrating of a given occasion or event comes always as a result of more careful selection over there. Of course our Edwin C. Hill, Alexander Woollcott, Floyd Gibbons or Lowell Thomas might give them a tonsil tussle for their shillings but certainly none of our run-of-the-mill spokesmen can come up to the [illegible] in Great Britain. [illegible] that [illegible] a [illegible] sharp [illegible] intelligent [illegible] manner[illegible].

Don't look now . . . but there's a man in this country who left London so he wouldn't see the coronation! That fellow, known everywhere as Lou Holtz, the vaudeville comedian, will be the guest of Lanny Ross during the "Show Boat" hour tonight (WNAC) between 9 and 10 o'clock.

Aboard "Show Boat" for the third time will be the lovely soprano, Nadine Conner. Miss Conner and Holtz will help Lanny in his salute to Charleston, S. C.

STRIKING SOLOIST

When it's "Magazine of the Air" time (WEEI) tomorrow morning at 11, coast to coast loudspeaker patrons will hear Betty Jane Atkinson, pretty 15-year-old violin prodigy. Betty Jane is being hailed by critics of the concert realm everywhere and recently held forth with honors with the Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestra. Her radio career is beginning and nothing but praise of her artistry is heard on every hand.

NEW DAMROSCH OPERA HAILED

New York, May 13 (US)—Walter Damrosch was the real "honor guest" at the Metropolitan, when his recently completed opera, "The Man Without a Country," had its world premiere under the baton of the composer.

It was no new experience for the veteran musician and dean of American conductors to offer a work of that character.

For in 1905, a matter of more than 30 years ago, his "Scarlet Letter" (also founded on a popular story by an American author, and based on colonial days) was produced at the old Academy of Music.

Completed in the composer's 75th year, Mr. Damrosch's inspiration was taken from the familiar story of the same title by Edward Everett Hale.

Boxer Revolt Told in Full in Encyclopedia

Cut off from communication with the outside world, a small band of Americans and Europeans—diplomatic officials and their families—huddled in fear during the month of June, 1900, in Peking, China.

Falling prey to the fury of the natives, the small group was surrounded by infuriated natives crying for the blood of "foreign devils."

They faced starvation and massacre at the hands of the Boxers, a secret Chinese society which aimed ostensibly at the expulsion of foreigners from China.

This story of the Boxer uprising and the timely rescue of the small band of diplomats and their families is one of the highlights of modern world history.

Like many other thrilling and complete stories dealing with history, the tale of the Boxers is told in interesting detail in the third volume of the new Standard American Encyclopedia.

The entire set of 15 volumes of this new up-to-date encyclopedia is being made available by the Boston Evening American to its readers. Volume III contains the immortale tale of the Boxers and thousands of Greater Boston Evening American readers have already read this story since the book was issued last Saturday.

Thousands more are getting Volume III this week and they also plan to get the remaining 12 books on successive weeks. Here's all you have to do, in case you've been overlooking this amazing offer:

Clip the coupons which appear daily on Page 2 of the Boston Evening American. When you have six consecutively numbered bring them with 44 or 68 cents to any coupon redemption station and get your book.

One price is for the "home" binding and the second for the "luxury lifetime" binding. Either one is yours for the taking for just a few pennies a day.

STORIES CLASH IN WILL FIGHT

Contestants seeking to break the death-bed will of Mrs. H[illegible] C. Nelson of Quincy were today prepared to furnish further evidence as the trial went into a third day in Norfolk Superior Court. A jury heard conflicting testimony yesterday as to Mrs. Nelson's mental condition during the second day of the trial.

Mrs. Helen Hedlund of Quincy, who claimed years of acquaintance with the late Mrs. Nelson, who died in her 65th year, testified for the contestants and said that for years Mrs. Nelson had lived in fear.

Mrs. Clara Green, sister-in-law of the dead woman, testified that she had never heard Mrs. Nelson tell of any dislike for Justus Strandberg of Quincy, brother of the woman, and one of the contestants.

Film He-Man Seeks Police Protection From Woman

San Diego, Cal., May 13 (AP)—Victor McLaglen, he-man of the movies, early today sought police protection from a woman.

Police Captain M. D. Neely said McLaglen reported his hostess became enraged during a party last night at a La Jolla residence.

"She threw beer bottles at me," McLaglen said.

Two husky officers escorted McLaglen to the La Jolla residence. He obtained personal effects and departed.

McLaglen, who owns a La Jolla home, is in San Diego to judge a bathing beauty contest.

The strapping actor told police, "I don't want to be in the middle of any trouble."

Rain---Strike Called Off

Roselle, N. J., May 13 (AP)—The 89 employes of the Travina Leather Products Company, finding the weather warm and pleasant, went on a sit-down strike on the lawn, under the shade trees.

They warned they would repeat the action daily until they receive their wage and hour demands—unless it rains.

LOUIS F. SWIFT, PACKER, DIES

Chicago, May 13—A notable industrial career, started in the little town of Sagamore, Mass., with the birth of Louis F. Swift, has come to an end here with the death of the former president of Swift & Co.

Swift died yesterday after several weeks of illness in his 76th year. Swift's career in Chicago started when he came here at the age of 14 with his family. Swift's father started the famous packing business and died in 1903 when Louis took over the reins. Since the latter's retirement from the company's presidency he has spent most of his time in Europe and California.

He leaves two children, Mrs. Ida S. Minoto and Louis, Jr.; four brothers, Charles, chairman of the board; Gustavus, president; Harold, vice-president, and George, of Boston, director, and two sisters, Mrs. Francis Neilson of Chicago, and Mrs. Ruth Maguire of New York.

WILLIAM H. O'BRIEN

Tomorrow morning in the Church of the Sacred Heart in Quincy at 9 o'clock funeral services will be held for William H. O'Brien, 57, former grand knight of the North Quincy council, Knights of Columbus. O'Brien died Tuesday at the Boston City Hospital. He was for 37 years an employe of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad. He leaves a widow and four sons, William, Jr., Joseph, Robert and Paul, all of Quincy.

MRS. J. H. BATCHELLER

Friends and relatives of Elizabeth Field Batcheller, wife of Professor James H. Batcheller, former M. I. T. faculty member, were saddened today by news of her death in Corvallis, Ore. Mrs. Batcheller, who was born in Weston, passed away Tuesday.

She is survived by Professor Batcheller; four sons, Ensign Edgar Batcheller, U. S. N., of Cambridge; C. Robin Batcheller of New York, Oliver of Corvallis and James, Jr., of Annapolis, and a sister, Mrs. Edwards Herman of Lincoln.

Favoring the Alien

IT IS a common blunder to assume that the United States is no longer being victimized in international affairs.

Many look back to the war and the subsequent default on the war debts as closed chapters in the career of Uncle Sam as a sucker.

Yet current policies, in the long run, may prove equally costly.

These include the FOREIGN GOLD BUYING POLICY and the so-called RECIPROCAL TRADE AGREEMENTS.

In buying all the world's new gold production at an ARTIFICIALLY HIGH PRICE, the United States is in effect swapping EARNING assets in the form of good securities for NON-EARNING assets in the form of surplus gold.

AS for the Reciprocal Trade agreements, they have proved to be new style methods of REDUCING THE PROTECTIVE TARIFF RATES ON AMERICAN INDUSTRY AND LABOR.

That they have been more helpful to foreigners than to Americans is shown by the unfavorable balance of trade in the first quarter of 1937 and by the fact that in 1936, while imports of merchandise increased by 18 per cent, exports rose only by 7 per cent.

Beclouded with idealistic phraseology, our tariff negotiators have been influenced by FOREIGN, rather than by genuinely AMERICAN, interests.

As Dr. Wilson Compton, of the National Lumber Manufacturers' Association, recently pointed out at the convention of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States:

"The State Department in these tariff matters, I think, has been more impervious or more resistant to domestic 'pressure politics' than Congress has ever been.

"I am not confident that it has been equally resistant to the 'pressure politics' of foreign countries with which it has undertaken to deal.

THUS it appeared unnecessary to go back a decade or two to detect efforts to let Uncle Sam hold the bag.

Such adverse tendencies sap vital economic energies, and tend to thwart efforts to lift the living standards of the American people.

Every Citizen's Duty

IT is an idle gesture to honor the men of the past who saved America and to blind one's self to the internal enemy that threatens her today.

Thus Massachusetts Adjutant-General Charles H. Cole addressed the 150 members of the Fusilier Veteran Association who gathered Tuesday at Bunker Hill.

"It is fitting," the General said, "that I should call to your attention now one of the most insidious dangers that is confronting this country—that horrid snake of Communism that is raising its head, not only in this State but in all parts of this country.

"Under the guise of various organizations and in the name of patriotism, they are trying to break down the institutions that our fathers fought to establish in 1775 and 1776 and they are obtaining help from men who get their orders from their leaders in Moscow.

"I warn you to be on your guard against these men who have clever writers pouring out literature and propaganda by the reams.

"IT IS FOOLISH TO STAND BY WHILE ALL THIS IS GOING ON. I IMPLORE YOU AND I WARN YOU TO ORGANIZE AGAINST COMMUNISM."

Never were truer words spoken. America is a free and democratic country today. But it will be neither free nor democratic tomorrow unless its people love freedom and democracy enough to resist the alien-inspired poison that is sweeping upon us like a tidal wave.

One Needs the Other

THE old story about the man who killed the goose that laid the golden eggs finds a modern parallel in the Boston address of Edward F. McGrady, assistant secretary of labor and eminent New Dealer.

"Labor must not forget," he told the Harvard Business School Alumni, "that management is seeking to sell its goods under the keenest of competition and that it is harassed by many problems of which labor is ignorant.

"Therefore, labor will have to establish patience, understanding and co-operation, high purposes and straight American ideals in all its industrial relations.

"It will have to create discipline among the union members and observance of the sacredness of contracts, efficiency in production and co-operation in the elimination of waste."

That is good advice. The future of this country rests as much with the employe as with the employer. One cannot succeed without the other.

No union, however strong, amounts to much when industry becomes so weakened that it can no longer provide employment.

The Government Collects

HARMON P. ELLIOTT, Cambridge manufacturer, setting up a $250,000 trust fund for his employes, learns that any man who tries "to share the wealth" must share first with Uncle Sam.

For his commendable decision to divide an estimated $17,500 annually among all his employes of more than ten years' service Mr. Elliott is penalized. The Federal Government takes $25,000 under its gift tax laws.

But that is not all, as Mr. Elliott and his employes will find out. From time to time, through the income tax, Uncle Sam will share the $17,500 also.

One can't dodge the Tax Grabber. Always, when the money table is set, he has not only a reserved seat but the first serving.

The Wife Who Works

The Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

Ruth journeyed to the land of the Hittites and was a big hit there. She wrote a best seller, and the Sanhedrin voted her a prize of 1000 talents.

Edwin C. Hill

Boaz stayed home, just plugging along. Whither she went he did not go also, and she petitioned the elders that her ways no longer be his ways. Boaz said everything had been all right until she won that prize. But henceforth their ways were apart.

That, of course, didn't and couldn't happen in the Biblical idyll, but it is the sad epilogue of many a Ruth and Boaz story nowadays.

In Waycross, Ga., Caroline Miller, who in 1934 received the Pulitzer prize for her novel, "Lamb in His Bosom," receives a final decree of divorce from her husband, Will D. Miller. She charges that her husband was "insanely jealous" of her, her book, and her success as a writer and lecturer.

He says he was "a faithful and affectionate husband" and they got on beautifully until she became "pleasure mad" after her success. He was the superintendent of the Baxley, Ga., school system, and she was his pupil.

A HUMAN TRAIT

It is easy to be chivalrous when you are strong and dominant. Deference to women, chivalrous fealty and courtesy, have been traditionally rendered to a weaker sex. Magnanimity always rests with the winner. Test that out when you go back from the city to your old home town, with a good suit of clothes, a bank roll and maybe a big-town name.

You won't quite catch the words, but you will know the boys are whispering "that so and so isn't going to high hat me—why, I knew him when—" All this at the moment when you are just spilling over with the milk of human kindness and perhaps envying the lads who stayed home.

Mme. Curie, the great French radiologist, and her scientist husband maintained a beautiful working partnership and rejoiced in each other's success. But most of us lack the amalgam of their noble, creative endeavor, and most of us are of coarser clay.

Just offhand, one would say that a husband was a poor sport who couldn't be happy over his wife's success, but that isn't the whole story.

Let me personalize this with the story of B., one of the soundest and best newspaper men I ever knew. He was of Scandinavian birth, reserved, reticent, a thorough craftsman, clever and ambitious. He had a fastidious sense of personal obligation and was the last man in the world anybody ever would accuse of bad sportsmanship.

THEY WERE HAPPY

He was happily married to a brisk, red-headed American girl. They had one child. His salary was adequate and their savings accumulated. They had a nice little country home up the river. His wife was a perfect housekeeper. It was a home of peace and well being.

Before their marriage, she had had several years experience in a big business office and had revealed fine abilities and drawn a good salary. She was intelligent and competent and applied the same abilities to the efficient management of her home. She had no regrets and was absorbed with rearing their small child.

One day my friend told me, with a show of pride, that his wife had a nice offer from an investment banking firm and he was glad that she had decided to accept. There was no reason why an intelligent woman should be cooped up in a home, he said. Mrs. B. was a brilliant success in her new work. The little girl was put in an excellent day school.

Mrs. B. had no trouble solving the old "home or career" dilemma. Their combined resources were sufficient to maintain an excellently serviced and smoothly running household. I began to hear of Mrs. B. around town. She was making addresses to luncheon clubs. Some novel personnel studies which she made brought her to the attention of the newspapers. She was frequently interviewed.

Mrs. B. wasn't the least bit upstage about her success. Every spare moment from her job was given to her home. They were both well-bred, courteous people, and I am sure that B. never said a word about the voices from the past that were crying down his wife's success. He became gloomy and aloof.

I knew what was the matter but I was puzzled. If he had been the sleazy sort of person who consumes himself with self-pity, it would have been understandable. But here was a generous, sportsmanlike, sensible man burnt up because his wife was successful!

DEATH FREED HIM

B. died. I don't think his wife had the slightest idea of what had done him in, and probably she hasn't today. It seems clear to me now.

B.'s masculinity, his birth and conditioning, had put him deeply in thrall to past centuries. Any viking would have lost face if his wife had hurled a heavier and deadlier spear.

And so are we all in thrall to the past, even in these days of free and equal careering.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

New York, May 13—These bright bantering young men serving drinks in the open-fronted soft drink stands are almost invariably from Texas. Proprietors have found they are the most accomplished of all at the counter. Rarely do they employ the native New Yorker.

O. O. McIntyre

City folk somehow get a kick out of the familiar conversation in the manner of the Texas panhandle. These jobs offer a first toe hold in the big city for the ambitious but not many remain for more than two or three weeks. Their aim is higher.

Incidentally, in proportion to population, Texans in general are the most frequent visitors to New York from any State. There are two hotels which depend almost entirely for patronage on visitors from the Lone Star. Revue shows are especially patronized by them.

Too, the Texas ladies, mostly wives of rich ranchers and oil magnates, are heavy spenders in the exclusive dressmaking and millinery salons. This is true also of their trade at the luxury establishments, jewelers, perfume parlors and the like.

Don Clarke used to tell of a twitterly New York newspaperman on the old World who walked long distances each evening toward his home uptown, thinking the fatigue might cure his insomnia. Some of his fellows would contrive to be sauntering casually down the avenue and pass him with indifferent greeting. Then hurrying around to the El, they'd scoot back up town and pass the sufferer again a little further northward on his route with the same casualness.

What success they had in making the victim think he was seeing things is not recorded. A mean trick.

In West 23d street lives J. R. Shaver, who for so long sold his fine drawings of children to New York and English papers. His vogue, once enormous, has passed and he lives in Dickensian dust and shadows with stacks of his favorite originals of the years gone by. This eclipse comes to almost every popular artist sooner or later. The Peter Arnos of today are often the Shavers of tomorrow.

Summer musing: We wonder what a Dakota pioneer would have thought on reading this winter's headline in the Times: "16,000 in City Fight Snow of 1.8 inches."

Last night I read in Ray Long's school history this query: "Do great epochs make great men or do great men make epochs?" With the ponderous idea as a neucleus, I began to wonder whether our occupations fashion us or whether we come into the world already equipped for our occupations.

In a minor key—and not particularly appropriate to the large text—it occurs to me that printers and telegraphers of my acquaintance in the news shops were quiet fellows with a placid regard for the turmoil of the news rooms and perhaps inward smiles at their knowledge of events, past and present, that might have embarrassed some of the noisier boys on the editorial side.

I have found without exception that proof readers have a way of enjoying life with detached serenity. They have quietly saved many editors and subeditors from ghastly mistakes.

Scene: On the avenue about a month ago I saw General John Pershing swinging along. He was hailed by a friend with a familiar "Why, hello, John!" Pershing answered the greeting warmly, gave a quick glance around in the manner of notables and then drew his friend around the corner into a doorway for a heart to heart talk.

They were going great guns when I sauntered on. Few oldsters have preserved their years and carriage so successfully as General Pershing.

Old burlesque scene: Grogan, the comedian, with the red flannel undershirt sleeves showing, is in a bar. His friend, the barkeep, has been called out and a couple of swells come in and ask for two pousse cafes. Grogan puts everything in them but the bar cat. As the orchestra plays he slides up and down the bar reaching for everything in sight and working himself up to a furious lather.

As a crowning move he sops up all the sloshings on the bar with the towel, wrings this out in the drinks, tears two handsful of straw from a dirty broom, sticks them in and serves.

By this time they were picking most of us up out of the aisles.

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

Now it is May—and the air is golden mist. A glittering, golden gauze, filled with flying pollen, perfumed petals and tiny, iridescent wings in quivering flight.

Elsie Robinson

Now it is spring, and everything is alive. Brown earth, blue shadow, and tumbling tumult of pigeons against the long leap of the sky—everything quivers with life . . . glitters and clamors with life.

I kneel and put my face against the breathing earth . . . I stand and touch the swaying trunk of a tree . . . I lift my eyes to the young leaves streaming in the wind . . . flying like torn, green lace through the glittering gauze of the air . . . tossing and turning in the sweet and urgent air . . . and everywhere there is life.

Everywhere there is life, panting and pushing, shoving and swarming, flooding and flowing.

Everywhere there is life and the opening to life.

ONE LONE EXCEPTION

Everywhere the old bark is being broken to make way for the new sap . . . and the old earth is being ripped to make way for the new blade . . . and the old sheath is being split to make way for the new flower.

Everywhere there is life and the giving way to life.

Everywhere—life. In turning earth and tumbling leaf and swelling bark . . . in tiny creatures, winged or furred or scaled . . . everywhere new life—except in you and in me.

Everything bending and being reborn to life—except yourself and myself.

We, alone—we human things—will not bend, will not give ourselves up.

We alone stand stiff against the flood and flow of spring . . . holding ourselves tight and locked . . . clutching our old habits and hopes, old fears and feuds . . . holding ourselves fast against change.

But how can we grow unless we change? How can we have new life unless we are willing to give up the old? How can we live unless we die and are born again?

Over and over we have wished for more life, new life, better life. Now it is here, tugging at our hearts . . . offering us that chance for which we have asked . . . but still we stand stiff, refusing.

LET US BE REBORN

For we are afraid of the new . . . we are afraid of the spring. We dare not bend to the spring.

We are afraid to be broken.

So we stand stiff and locked against the gypsy call of spring . . . clutching the old, the worn out, the dead things. Clutching death, afraid to give it up.

Why do we grow old? Why do we die?

BECAUSE WE ARE AFRAID TO BE YOUNG, WE ARE AFRAID TO LIVE.

We have minds—let us use them!

We have hearts—let us open them!

Let us be as wise, at least, as the earth and the trees and the flowers. Let us say to life:

"Come, Life—take me! Have your way with me! I will not shut the door any more. I will not try to run away nor fight against you. I will dare to bend . . . I will dare to be broken, if need be, that I may be made new again.

"Come, Life . . . I give up. I give up my graves. I give up my old hates and hurts.

"I will stop thinking of death. I will risk life. I will risk new thoughts, new desires, new loves. I will dare to live again.

"Come, Life, with all you have! Come with your quickening wind and rain . . . your dangers and risks, humiliations and failures, griefs and losses.

"Come with all those changes and challenges which will shake me free from my old sheath, my old form, into a new body, a new spirit.

"Come, Life—and take me! For I, too, am your child. And I, too, would be reborn with spring."

"Yure's Truely" By Winston Norman

Mr. Editor
Boston Evening American,
DEAR MR. EDITOR:

Now that we got done crowning George the 6, I hope America will go back to being a Republic again. With all the money we threw away on boat tickets & radio, yelling for somebody elses king, it begun to look like we'd fot the War of 1776 for nothing.

I am glad its all over, becauze I got very tired of my wife going royal on me, worrying about Queen Elizabeths bangs, and claiming she could be as good a Queen as her, if she'd of maried a King instead of a bum like me.

I am in favor of democrazy for a change, where we quit worrying about who will fall over who's Coronation robe, and begin worrying about how many fish our President caught.

By the way, now that we crowned George the 6 for them, how about England crowning us with a few War Debts? But I don't mean no funny plans like they brung out a while back, where they will pay us the War Debts if we will loan them the money to pay with.

England's plan reminds me of a man that I got drunk and loaned $5 to one time. I seen him in Charlie's Bar last week, and I says to him, "Say how about paying me that $5 you owe me?" So he says, "Alright, have you got $10 change?"

Not suspecting nothing, I reach in my hind pocket and come up with a $10 bill. I give him the $10 bill.

"Now," he says to me, "to show you what a fine fellow I am, here's the $5 I owe you, plus $5 interest," he says. "You make a 100 per cent profit on the loan."

"Thank you very much," I says, and I took the $10 bill from him. Then I thunk a minnit, and I says, "But what about the $10 I just give you?"

"Why, you clown," he says, "you got it in your hand."

That there is England's war debt plan in a nutshell, and we wouldn't never fall for it if we was in our right mind. But after the way we fell for their coronation, it don't look like we are.

Yure's truly,
WINSTON NORMAN.

Isn't It So?

It isn't true that you can always spot a bridal couple. Some people are polite to each other after years and years of matrimony.

The average bridegroom would understand more about love if he would try just a little harder to understand the woman of his choice.

Bible Text: "Let the heart of them rejoice that seek the Lord."—I Chronicles XVI, 10. Suggested by the Rev. Arthur Hopkinson, Methodist Church, Fitchburg.

That's That -:- By Bruce Gustin

The national debt has passed the 35 BILLION dollar mark for the first time in history. It is up to $35,039,956,335. And it is going still higher. Federal revenues have been increasing, but so has federal spending. And as long as the administration keeps on spending more than it is taking in, the national debt will continue to increase.

And the national debt is only a part of the debt burden of the American people. Cities, states, counties, school districts and other political subdivisions also have debts. And so do business and individuals. It is conservatively estimated that the total funded debt of all borrowers in this country now is more than 153 BILLION dollars. Anyone who expects all this enormous burden of indebtedness ever will be paid off certainly is optimistic.

No sooner is economy talk heard in Congress than it is met by another flood of suggestions for more spending. Just recently the President urged that governmental expenses be reduced. A few days later the administration was openly backing a move for continuing construction of the Florida ship canal.

And this time the project was urged by the Secretary of the Navy as a national defense measure. He said it would shorten the route between the Gulf of Mexico and the Atlantic ocean, "which would be of material value during war to the shipment of necessary materials for both military and commercial use."

A canal straight across the United States would shorten the distance, for ships, between the Atlantic and the Pacific oceans, too.

The War Department's board of army engineers has declared the Florida ship canal project unjustified economically. Major-General Markham, chief of engineers, who favors construction of the canal, figures it will cost 34 million dollars more than the original estimate of 163 millions. An ordinary taxpayer may ask, "Where are we going to get close to 200 million dollars for this ship canal when the federal government already is more than 35 BILLIONS in debt and isn't taking in enough to meet ordinary running expenses?"

Moved by the realization that the Hindenburg disaster could not have occurred if the gas bags of the German dirigible had been filled with helium instead of hydrogen the Senate Military Affairs Committee has approved a bill to liberalize the export of helium for commercial purposes.

The United States has a virtual monopoly of the supply of helium, with known large sources in Colorado, Texas and Kansas. While exports now are permitted for scientific uses, the present policy has had the effect of restricting production, and large quantities of helium undoubtedly have been lost because private producers could not develop foreign markets.

Senator Thomas of Utah says: "We ought to sell helium to foreigners for non-military purposes" and favors sales to Germany for operation of her commercial dirigible service. But it is not an easy matter to insure helium sold abroad will not be used for military purposes. The most assurance that can be given is the word of a foreign nation and that is anything but a guaranty nowadays.

Dr. Eckener who designed the Hindenburg and who probably knows more than any other man about dirigibles says that "henceforth no passenger would set foot in a hydrogen filled airship," and "therefore, regardless of cost, we should use helium." He declares "it appears that future lighter-than-air transportation must depend on the development of adequate sources of helium."

If Dr. Eckener urges German aviation authorities to decree there shall be no more flying with hydrogen, that will open a big market for American helium. Selling helium we do not need to Germany for use in commercial airships should not be any more objectionable than building a battleship in this country for Russia.

The new six-million dollar building of the Mellon Institute in Pittsburgh is more important to the future welfare of the American people than are all the political palaces in Washington, D. C. For this Mellon Institute building is dedicated to scientific research and it houses the world's largest research institution.

Since its beginning, in 1911, the institute's scientists have made discoveries which resulted in the establishment of ten new industries and aided 4000 American companies. And announcement has just been made of the perfection of a new form of quinine which, during the last winter, cut the death rate nearly 50 per cent in 100 cases of pne[illegible].
